THE DOCTOR'S PRIVATE SECRETARY

UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE
I. O. D. E.

Presented at the Armouries Under the Efficient Direction of Mr. Theodore H. Bird.

A large and enthusiastic audience filled the armouries on Wednesday for the first-night performance of "The Doctor's Private Secretary," presented by Mr. Bird and his well-trained company of clever young townspeople.
The play, an exciting melodrama, held the interest and close attention of the audience to the end, and gave an opportunity to the embryo artists to discover their latent histrionic ability.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

Flossie Glenwood, Ned's Sweetheart, Miss Mary Bain
Kate Paxton, an adventuress, Mrs. W. E. Powell
Millie Murton, Flossie's chum Miss Elsie Woodcock Old "Meg," Kate's mother Mrs. Edna Curran
Mott St. Mull, a pickpocket Miss Abbie Judson
Doctor Leslie, the uncle Mr. Blake Huyck
Richard Glenwood, a thief Mr. Harry McNeil
Bill Sykes, Richard's "Pal," Mr. Victor Jones
"Noah," not so black as painted, Mr. Hugo Gleeson
Ned Archer, in love with Flossie, Mr. Theodore H. Bird

Miss Bain made an attractive Flossie Glenwood, portraying cleverly the various moods and emotions of jealousy, fear, tenderness and grief, as well as humor, for which the character called.

Mrs. Powell gave a finished interpretation of the character of the hardened adventuress, Kate Paxton, who was yet not altogether bad, with the graceful ease of a professional.

Miss Woodcock, in the roll of Millie Murton, was charmingly natural, delighting the audience with her piquant girlish ways.

Miss Judson, as "Old Meg," Kate's mother, looked and played the part of the old hag of the "devil's kitchen" to perfection.

Miss Davis played the role of the grateful little pickpocket, Mott St.
Mull, very acceptably.

Mr. Huyck carried out well the character of the dignified though absent-minded Dr. Leslie, who cured the ills of society girls with a bread pill and a glass of pure water taken three times a day with a few grains of pure imagination.

Mr. McNeil was a decided success as Richard Glenwood, the wealthy hypocritical villain, who was a thief, not through necessity, but for sheer love of villainy. He played the part, which might easily have been exaggerated in the hands of an amateur, private secretary to Dr. Leslie in order to watch and track down his nephew, Richard Glenwood, with whom he lived. It was a case of love at first sight with Ned and Flossie Glenwood, upon their love affairs and the machinations of Richard and his unsavoury friends the plot of the play is based.

The appropriate setting of the scenes and the beautiful and artistic gowns worn added much to the success of the production.

The entertainment opened with "Me and My Gal," a duet sung by Miss Marion Wilson, very winsome in bridal array, and Mr. Wolfe as bridegroom, assisted by a chorus of pretty girls dressed as brides, and good looking young men who danced rhythmically as they sang.

The specialties between Acts I and II by Master Emerson O'Connor, of Kingston, who sang with much spirit "Glory of the Grand Old Flag" was assisted by a chorus of small girls and boys each waving a flag.

This was followed by a solo "Down
Where the Black-eyed Susans Grow," very sweetly sung by Miss Hilda Mc-Greer, accompanied by a chorus of girls in middies and sun bonnets, who danced and sang with their partners in overalls and cow breakfasts. (The aforementioned handsome young men) behind a low hedge of black-eyed Susans.

Between Acts II and III Mr. Weiss sang the "Long, Long Trail," while Miss Hazel Roblin made a pretty picture singing under a pine tree, as a long trail of boys and girls, each with a flash-light, came up the aisle and wound about her taking up her refrain.

Between Acts III and IV Miss Marion Wilson, carrying a basket of roses and singing "The Ladder of Roses," pirouetted down to the entrance and led up to the stage her chorus of boys and girls, where ladders entwined with thousands of pink and white roses awaited them up which the girls mounted, putting the finishing touch to an enchanting scene.

The grand finale was a most fitting climax to a most successful patriotic entertainment. The stage was filled with all the performers, the principals of the chorus coming forward in turn to sing a verse of their special song.

As the opening bars of "America" were played Mrs. F. Madden came forward carrying outspread behind her large silk stars and stripes. Mrs. Will. Daly appeared with a handsome outstretched Union Jack as the audience sang "God Save the King." These two beautiful white-clad representatives of the two great allied Anglo-Saxon nations, now fighting side by side, made a most impressive tableau against the back-ground of the flags.

Mr. Bird has good reason to be proud of the result of his tireless energies, patience and ability in the training and staging of this unique entertainment, from which he eliminated the often tedious waits between acts by the introduction of the charming specialties.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

On the evening of Friday, June 7, a few friends, representing the community, met at the home of Mr. A.
Mrs. W. J. Winter where Mrs. A.
McLeod and Laura were guests of the evening.

W. H. McLeod, the son and brother, has answered the call of his county and enlisted for services overseas hence the necessity of breaking the home, as Mr. A. P. McLeod had not been able for some time to work on the farm.

During the course of the evening the following address was read:
Mrs. Knapp, and a purse of money was presented by Mrs. W. J. Winter
Dear Mrs. McLeod, and Laura

It was with the deepest feeling regret that we learned some time ago of your intended departure from our midst and community.

We, who remain at home here, are the ones who shall realize what neighbor we are losing in your parture from here. A new sphere of life is to open up before you, and with the swift vicissitudes of time new friends must be made and fostered with care, for new ones can never mean as much as those made in former days.

With us it is different; new friends do not present themselves as rapidly in the rural life as in the urban, and so we feel that after all we are not great losers.

This community will be the poor to a great extent. Willing workers were you both in the church where you both have held the exalted positions of teachers, willing helpers the community, young going leaves breach which is, at the present time, beyond repair.

Your quiet, simple lives and manner in your home and abroad, have no doubt, been an added inspiration to those who were beginning the upward climb of life's ladder. We hope to realize what sacrifices you have made that the king's army might be the richer by a true loyal son and brother.

To Mrs. McLeod we say that when the son goes, or where he has gone his words and actions reflect to plainly the true, noble home life you have lived, and speak, more than possible to express in words, the determination you had to lead a Christian life.

We assure you again that you leave our midst with the sighs and regret of your neighbors and friends, who can scarcely find words to express their sorrow at the vacancy caused by your departure. We feel that order to give you some slight token of the high esteem in which you were held in our midst we could not this occasion pass without showing to you, in some tangible form, our deep appreciation for you both.
such, we ask you to accept this pur-and trust that you know better than we, where it can be used, so that it may be used to the best advantage when it comes.

PRESENTATION.

On May 11th a number of M. Cook's Citizens' Club, a Sunday School Class of the Selby Methodist church, with their teacher and other friends motored to Kingston to present W. H. McLeod, who has enlisted in the service of the King and Country, with a gold wrist watch.

They met Will at the Randolph Hotel, where he, as thought, was awaiting his mother only.

At the appointed time, the President of the class, Mr. Gordon Anderson, in his usual pleasing manner, pressed the good wishes of the class and of the community in general, a Mr. Sam Knapp presented the watch.

Will, in a few well-chosen words expressed his surprise and very great pleasure on receiving such a handsome gift, and in conclusion desired that his thanks be conveyed to the class and to all other friends for the very useful memento.

After spending an hour in conversation and music all repaired to the dining room and had tea together.

Then with all good wishes for his friends started on their return trip to Selby.

PRESENTATION.

A few friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. Arthur McLeod on the evening of May 14th, for the purpose of presenting their young son, James H., with a gold wrist watch before his return to Kingston route for Camp Petawawa, where he will be in training in the 72 Queen's Battery, previous to going overseas to do his bit for King and Country.

As the evening advanced Mr. Gordon Anderson, as chairman, brought to mind the object of the gathering and expressed in his very able manner the feelings of the community in regard for a time one of their most popular young men. Gordon also spoke of the pride which everyone entertained for all the Canadian boys who were taking their places on the firing line. After which Mr. Sam Knapp presented the watch. James, in reply, spoke of his pleasure and appreciation on receiving such a useful gift. He wished his thanks to be conveyed to his many friends for their kindly thoughts him, and said that when he was miles away "Somewhere in France he would have this gentle reminder of the friends back home, who had welfare at heart."

The remainder of the evening was spent in music and speeches, from Rev. Mr. Cooke, Rev. J. H. McLeod and others.

After singing "For he's a jolly good fellow," and wishing James a safe return, the gathering returned to the respective homes.

OH! YOU WEEDS!

Editor of the Express, Napanee:

Sir,—Two weeks ago you kindly published a letter from me, but in looking around the streets I see no appreciable attempt to rid them of the weed-beds along the sides of them.

Of course it was scarcely to be expected that the Mayor and Council would lower their dignity by giving a demonstration of how it should be done, but the weeds are growing and seeds are dropping and being carried by the wind on to the lawns and gardens of unoffending citizens, and every day matters are getting worse.

Surely the council cannot be waiting for the thistles to grow so that they may be able to get a good feed.

The town owns a machine well-fitted to do the major part of this very necessary work, viz., the road scraper, which could be run just close enough to the walks so that the cement would be uninjured. It would not take many men with hoes to complete the work right up to the sidewalks.

In a short time the rag-weed and the goldenrod, and other specimens of noxious weeds, will disseminate their poisons to produce hay-fever and other disagreeable, dangerous and deadly diseases. Have the Medical Health Board officers and the representative of the Provincial Department of Agriculture no duties in this connection?

These weed-beds are unsightly as well as unhealthy and one would naturally look to the President of the Historical Society, who is an ardent admirer of the beautiful in nature, to take an active hand in this matter.

The skirts of the churches are not clean, for while they do their best to keep their grounds looking nice, the weeds along the sidewalks spoil all the effect of their labours. The ministers and officers of the various churches should get busy.

Right along Dundas street and the cross streets running therefrom are some great specimens of burdocks and docken just nicely ripening their seed. The dandelion and others have already sent their seeds where they would do the greatest harm.

The county buildings are disgraced by about as bad a bed of weeds as any to be found in town. Is it possible that the county officials will permit such a crime to continue without any effort to have it removed.

Perhaps the town clerk will advise the citizens through the medium of the press whether the Mayor and Council can be prosecuted for criminal neglect.

ALLIED LINE IS INTA

Germans Pay Full Price Every Step Gained.

Enemy Threw Vast Armies of Best Men Into Effort to Break Through, and Fiercest Fight of War Is Now In Progress. Foch's Army Was Prepared Stroke.

LONDON, June 11.—The Germans in the centre of their new attack the front between Montdidier and Noyon have gained additional ground against the French, but on both right and left wings they are held.

In violent successive attacks they captured the villages of Mery, Belloy and St. Maur and pressed forward and gained a foothold in the villages of Marquise, last named place representing deepest point of penetration since offensive began, between five and miles.

The French still are exacting heavy toll in lives from the Germans as they deliver their attacks and are giving ground only forced to do so under superior numbers. Nowhere has the enemy been able to pierce the front, which has been bent back in perfect whenever the necessity arose.

The battle is described by correspondents as one of the most furious that has been fought since it began, with the enemy unusually reckless in wasting life to gain objectives.

"Throughout the night and during the battle raged along the front of attack with unabated fury," says the Reuter correspondent. French headquarters, whose position was held at two o'clock in the afternoon. "On the wings the enemy was still held on practically the line in spite of his persistent and reckless attempts to advance."

"On the extreme left the village of Courcelles changed hands six times. On the extreme right Plemont though almost in the first line, still holding out, the little French garrison having beaten off a wave of German infantry. Mont Renaud still ours."

"In the centre of the battlefield pouring in fresh battalions the Germans succeeded in pushing deep into the line and are pressing southward between Cuvilly and Thiescourt. Fighting was of the bloodiest character, hand-to-hand, over the ruins of every village, hamlet and farm. Enemy's losses were extraordinary heavy, there having been this no surprise in the attack."

"The enemy has from 18 to 20 divisions in his attacking lines. Behind this line his reserves are readied to replace shattered divisions. We reckon on a prolonged and desperate struggle, and may have to meet the shocks of von Hindenburg's formidable reserves before the enemy breaks off."

"Further losses of ground will not discourage us. The enemy instead of sweeping on victorious in the first days of the Aisne battle is advancing painfully yard by yard, paying the full price for every step. His main effort for the moment is towards the Oise, with the object of turning the salient we hold in line, with its apex at Pont-l'Eveque on the Oise, which comprises Cognacq and Ourcq forest in an bend of the river."

Fighting in this war probably never has been more severe than going on to-day in the great battle of French and German armies.

Fighting in this war probably never has been more severe than that going on to-day in the great battle of French and German armies between Montdidier and Noyon.

The Germans attacking on ground where the Entente Allies were ready to receive the shock have found themselves thrown into slaughter-house, whence most of them never will make an exit.

When the German infantry began coming over in the densest mass they encountered immediately an extremely hot fire from both machine guns and artillery, which mowed them down. Ever since, as fresh waves entered the conflict, they were subjected to similar punishment.

Zeebrugge Is Blocked.

LONDON, June 11.—The plight of the Germans at the Belgian submarine base of Zeebrugge, in consequence of the measures taken by the British navy to blockade the port, even more serious than has been believed heretofore. Photographs taken from airplanes show that entrance to the harbor is rapidly silting up, and that accordingly the British effort to close the channel is being reinforced by nature.

The sunken vessel inside the breakwater which was at first believed to be an enemy destroyer, appears to be a large dredger. The loss of this ship evidently has enabled the Germans in their attempt to clear the channel.

Ukraine Has Ambitions.

PARIS, June 11.—Under German inspiration, the Ukraine is developing Asiatic ambitions, according to Swiss newspapers, which attach some significance to the arrival Kiev of a delegation representing Rada of Russian Manchuria.

The delegation demands annexation to the Ukraine of the territories situated beyond Lake Baikal, including valuable oil lands in the provinces of Amur and Russian Manchuria. The Germans are circulating statements that the population of these rich provinces is composed of Ukrainians to the extent of 80 percent.

JAPAN MAY AID.

German Officers Are Now Active In Siberia.

LONDON, June 11.—"German officers for the first time are now taking a hand in Siberian politics," a Pekin despatch to the Times reports, "and the fact that they have begun operations must not be overlooked."

"Owing to the concentration against him, Col. Semenoff has fallen back on Borsa Station, 120 miles from Karimsko Junction. His opponents, who now hold the Onon, consist of 2,300 German and Austrian prisoners and 700 sailors, with nine pieces of heavy artillery, three batteries of field and mountain guns and four machine guns. Another force of prisoners, possibly 3,000 strong, is reported at Chita (the capital of Transbarkala).

Although it has been reported that Gen. Semenoff is hourly in expectation of Japanese troops to support him, there is no confirmation that these troops actually are on the way.

It has been learned, however, that strong recommendations have been made by the diplomatic corps for the immediate intervention of the Japanese in the face of the growing German menace. These recommendations have been forwarded to the Governments of the respective diplomats, including the Washington Government.

The friction between Lt.-Gen. Horvath, military commander at Harbin, and Gen. Semenoff has subsided, Semenoff having agreed to recognize Horvath's authority. Semenoff, however, will have a free hand militarily in trans-Balkalia.

What seemingly lends color to Gen. Semenoff's announcement of expected Japanese support is an order issued by the railway authorities prohibiting freight shipments between Harbin and Chang-Chung for eight days. There are also rumors that the railway has received instructions to prepare for the early transportation of a large force from Chang-Chung. Reports of Japanese military movements are officially denied, but it is admitted that definite operations by China and Japan with allied co-operation are imminent.

Public opinion generally welcomes the idea of intervention, recognizing the necessity which throws the burden upon Japan. Expressions of regret have been heard, however, that American troops will not take part in the intervention, as the greatest confidence is reposed in them.

TWO METHODS CONTRASTED

Germans Bomb Hospitals and British Bomb Fighting Units.

LONDON, June 11.—The Germans bombed British hospitals in France seven times between May 15 and June 1, according to a statement made in the House of Commons yesterday by J. I. Macpherson, Under-Secretary of the War Office. The casualties numbered 991. These are as follows:

Killed—Officers, 11; other ranks, 318; nursing sisters, 5; women's auxiliary corps, 8; civilians, 6.

Wounded—Officers, 18; other ranks, 534; nursing sisters, 11; women's auxiliary corps, 7; civilians, 73.

"Our bombing airplanes impeded the enemy's advance and harassed his troops and transport with constant machine-gun

FOCH KEEPS BLUDGEON

Reason Why Allied General Is Holding Back Reserves.

He Declares That Adversary Can Only Be Overthrown by Successful Offensive and That the Blow When It Is Delivered Later In the Year Must Be a Knock-out One.

LONDON, June 11.—That battles can be won in the end only by the army which takes the offensive is the significant declaration made by Gen. Foch, commander-in-chief of the Allies, in an important article contributed by him to the weekly journal, The Field, in which he discusses the problem of the soldier and the way to victory.

"Modern warfare, to arrive at its end and to impose its will on the enemy," says Gen. Foch, "recognize only one means—destruction of the enemy's organized forces.

"War undertakes and prepares this destruction by battle, which brings about the overthrow of the adversary, disorganizes his command, destroys his discipline, and nullifies his units as far as their fighting power is concerned.

"Our first axiom must be that completely to achieve its object, a battle must not be purely defensive. A purely defensive battle, even well conducted, does not result in a victory and a vanquished. It is simply a game that must be begun over again.

"From this it is an obvious corollary that an offensive, whether started at the beginning of an action or whether it follows the defensive, can only give results and in consequence must always be adopted at the finish.

"To maintain our position is not synonymous with being victorious, and even prepares for a defeat.

"If we remain where we are and do not pass to the offensive to fix the direction of attack, to guard against the plans of the enemy and prevent him from carrying out the same manoeuvre, we must undertake to carry on and sustain numerous combats, each with determined aim.

"But since there remains no doubt that decisive attack is the very key-stone of a battle, all other actions which make up a battle must be envisaged, considered, organized, provided with forces in the measure in which they will prepare, facilitate and guarantee development of a decisive attack characterized by this mass, its surprise, its speed, and for which, in consequence, it is essential that there shall be the maximum reserve force possible of troops of manoeuvres. The reserve—that is to say the prepared bludgeon—is organized and kept carefully instructed to execute the single act of battle from which results are expected, namely, the decisive attack.

"Reserves must be husbanded with the most extreme parsimony so that the bludgeon may be strong enough to make the blow as violent as possible. Let loose at the finish, without any lurking idea of saving them, with a well-thought-out plan for winning the battle at a point chosen and determined, reserves are thrown in all together in an action surpassing in violence and energy all other phases of battle, an action with proper characteristic—surprise, mass and speed. All our forces really participate, either by preparing it or by carrying it out.

"In this, our supreme aim, we must not be deceived by appearances. Although theory fails when applied by feeble hands and when accessories obscure the main principle, history and reason shows that in battle there ghting in this war probably has been more severe than that on to-day in the great battle French and German armies between Montdidier and Noyon.

The Germans attacking on a side where the Entente Allies ready to receive the shock have themselves thrown into a shelter-house, whence most of never will make an exit. When the German infantry began moving over in the densest masses encountered immediately an extremely hot fire from both machine and artillery, which mowed down. Ever since, as fresh entered the conflict, they were to similar punishment.

Zeebrugge Is Blocked.

LONDON, June 11.—The plight of Germans at the Belgian submarine base of Zeebrugge, in consequence of the measures taken by the British navy to blockade the port, is more serious than has been before. Photographs just from airplanes show that the entrance to the harbor is rapidly silting up, and that accordingly the British fort to close the channel is reinforced by nature. The sunken vessel inside the water which was at first believed to be an enemy destroyer, now appears to be a large dredger. The of this ship evidently has crippled the Germans in their attempts to clear the channel.

Ukraine Has Ambitions.

IRIS, June 11.—Under German domination, the Ukraine is developing Asiatic ambitions, according to Swiss newspapers, which attach significance to the arrival at of a delegation representing the of Russian Manchuria. The delegation demands annexation to the Ukraine of the territories beyond Lake Baikal, including valuable oil lands in the provinces of Amur and Russian Manchuria. The Germans are circulating statements that the population of rich provinces is composed of Ukrainians to the extent of 80 per

"On Sunday our flying squadron co-operating with the French on the Noyon-Montdidier battlefield, worked continually from dawn till dark," says the official statement on aerial operations yesterday. "Our bombing airplanes impeded the enemy's advance and harassed his troops and transport with constant machine-gun fire."

"Strong patrols of scout machines swept the battle area throughout the day, while high-flying machines protected those below from air attack."

"Among the targets hit were an airfield near Roye, where hostile machines on the ground were set afire; an ammunition dump at Montdidier, which went up in a sheet of flame; canteens and wagons at Coucy, lorries at Laguay and Hainville, and infantry in trenches and on the roads along and behind the whole fighting lines."

TITLES ARE UNPOPULAR.

Storm of Criticism Raised by the British Press.

LONDON, June 11.—The new list of honors of the Order of the British Empire has brought another burst of criticism.

The Evening Standard again draws attention to the inclusion in the British list of a number of Dominion recipients, remarking: "It is most unfair that a few folk from overseas who happen to be on the doorstep, namely, in London, should get rewarded in advance of their fellows. This slovenly way of doing things is likely to be especially resented in Canada, for Premier Borden has said that he has no time yet to prepare a list of Canadian recipients."

The Saturday Review declares: "The more democratic we become the more insatiable grows the appetite for titles. The sterner and more logical Canadians frown on these weaknesses, but we are afraid some of their most successful men will slip over to the Old Country to end their days."

The News says the thin stream of titles under the new Order has become a raging torrent in the noise of which it is impossible to hear oneself speak.

The Chronicle declares the list loses distinction and honor for the deserving is diminished by the inclusion of many mediocrities.

Austrian Prisoners Captured.

ROME, June 11.—"The action of both artilleries was quite intense from the Astico to the Piave and moderate on the rest of the front," says the announcement from Italian headquarters to-day. "To the south of the Adige a British party in a successful surprise attack inflicted considerable losses on the enemy and brought back 11 prisoners."

"During the air fighting yesterday five machines were brought down."

BRITISH SAVED RHEIMS.

Bitter Fighting In Vicinity of the Cathedral City.

PARIS, June 11.—The most severe among the minor battles fought recently, in the Marne-Rheims region, was in the vicinity of St. Euphrase and Champlat, westward from Rheims. The Germans launched a serious attack here at dawn on Thursday morning along a four-mile front. They planned to pierce the allied lines to a depth of two and one-half miles, which would permit them to outflank Rheims mountain and thus capture the city. It would at the same time reduce the salient held by the Allies, which endangers a large part of the line. The village and spur of Bligny fell into their hands when they came forward in dense waves, but the British immediately counter-attacked and took the spur.

Simultaneously the French counter-attacked and reached the outskirts of Bligny, and on a second attempt recaptured the village and re-established the line. The Germans suffered most severely from artillery fire, the two divisions engaged losing many killed and over 200 prisoners.

The enemy seemed somewhat disheartened, replying only feebly to the allied fire. Prisoners arriving at the rear in small batches appear to be thoroughly exhausted and depressed by the turn affairs are taking.

Alsace-Lorraine Anti-German.

AMSTERDAM, June 11.—The military dictatorship in Alsace-Lorraine was denounced in the Reichstag Saturday by Hermann Wendel, Socialist Deputy. He said four-fifths of the population was strongly pro-German when the war began, but that now conditions were entirely reversed.

Deputy Waldstein, Progressive, corroborated Herr Wendel's statement.

Faces Murder Charge.

COBALT, June 11.—"I've fixed the old b——. He'll make no more trouble." These words, given in evidence by Ada Morrison, a young girl, at the preliminary hearing in the case of Charles Cooper, charged with the murder of Theodore Taylor, sr., at his home near Tomstown last month, formed the sensational feature of the proceedings held at Englehart. The witness declared that the words had been used by the accused man in a conversation at the Morrison home, where he lived, at the dinner table on the day following the tragedy. Counsel for the defence endeavored to shake the girl's testimony, but she held her ground. The magistrate committed the prisoner for trial at the next Assizes on a charge of murder.

A serious revolt has broken out among the Austrian troops concentrated on the east front.

WAS THANKED BY KING

YOUNG KENTUCKIAN WENT TO FRANCE IN C.E.F.

He Was Wounded and Received a Distinguished Conduct Medal—He Describes Visit of British Monarch to the Hospital to Express Gratitude of the British People.

SERGT. ALEX. M'CLINTOCK is a young Kentuckian who joined the 87th Battalion, Canadian Grenadier Guards. He was seriously wounded and soon afterward was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal "for conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great courage and determination during the raid against the enemy's trenches. He rescued several wounded men at great personal risk."

Sergt. McClintock was discharged from the Canadian army and is now a member of the U. S. A. Reserve Corps. He has recently published a book, "Best o' Luck," which not only described methods in present day warfare but gives many interesting anecdotes and incidents in the young soldier's career. An extract from the book is here given:

If it were possible, I should say something here which would be fitting and adequate about the English women who nursed the twenty-five hundred wounded men in General Hospital No. 5, at Rouen. But that power isn't given me. All I can do is to fall back upon our most profound American expression of respect and say that my hat is off to them. One nurse in the ward in which I lay had been on her feet for fifty-six hours, with hardly time even to eat. She finally fainted from exhaustion, was carried out of the ward, and was back again in four hours, assisting at an operation. And the doctors were doing their bit, too, in living up to the obligations which they considered to be theirs. An operating room was in every ward, with five tables in each. After the fight on the Somme, in which I was wounded, not a table was vacant any hour in the twenty-four, for days at a time. Outside of each room was a long line of stretchers containing patients next awaiting surgical attention. And in all that stress I did not hear a word of complaint from the surgeons, who stood hour after hour with their skill and training for the petty pay of British army medical officers.

On Dec. 5 I was told I was well enough to be sent to England and, on the next day, I went on a hospital ship which every medical officer in our army ought to have a chance to inspect. Nothing ingenuity could contrive for convenience and comfort was missing. Patients were sent below decks in elevators and placed in swinging cradles, which hung level no matter what the ship's motion might be. As soon as I had been made comfortable in my particular cradle I was given a box which had engraved upon it: "Presented with the compliments of the Union Castle Line. May you have a speedy and good recovery." The box contained cigarettes, tobacco and a pipe.

When the ship docked at Southampton after a run of eight hours across the channel, each patient was asked what part of the British Isles he would like to be taken to for the to eat and smoke all the things that were brought to me by Americans, just because I was an American, I'd be back in that hospital now, only getting fairly started on the job. It's some country when you need it.

The wounded soldier, getting back to England, doesn't have a chance to imagine that his services are not appreciated. The welcome he receives begins at the railroad station. All traffic is stopped by the Bobbies to give the ambulances a clear way to the station. The people stand in crowds, the men with their hats off, while the ambulances pass. Women rush out and throw flowers to the wounded men. Sometimes there is a cheer, but usually only silence and words of sympathy.

The King George Hospital was built to be a Government printing office and was nearing completion when the war broke out. It has been made a paradise for convalescent men. The bareness and sick suggestion and characteristic smell of the average hospital are unknown here. There are soft lights and comfortable beds and pretty women going about as visitors. The stage beauties and comedians come and entertain us. The food is delicious and the chief thought of every one seems to be to show the inmates what a comfortable and cheery thing it is to be ill among a lot of real friends. I was there from December until February, and my recollections of the stay are so pleasant that sometimes I wish I was back.

On the Friday before Christmas there was a concert in our ward. Among the artists who entertained us were Fay Compton, Gertrude Elliott (sister of Maxine Elliott), George Robie and other stars of the London stage. After our protracted stay in the trenches and our long absence from all the civilized forms of amusement, the affair seemed to us the most wonderful show ever given. And, in some ways, it was. For instance, in the most entertaining of dramatic exhibitions, did you ever see the lady artists go around and reward enthusiastic applause with kisses? Well, that's what we got. And I am proud to say that it was Miss Compton who conferred this honor upon me.

At about three o'clock on that afternoon, when we were all having a good time, one of the orderlies threw open the door of the ward and announced in a loud voice that His Majesty, the King, was coming in. We could not have been more surprised if some one had thrown in a Mills bomb. Almost immediately the King walked in, accompanied by a number of aides. They were all in service uniforms, the King having little in his attire to distinguish him from the others. He walked around, presenting each patient with a copy of "Queen Mary's Gift Book," an artistic little volume with pictures and short stories by the most famous of English artists and writers. When he neared my bed he turned to one of the nurses and inquired:

"Is this the one?"

The nurse nodded. He came and sat at the side of the bed and shook hands with me. He asked me what part of the United States I had come from, how I got my wounds and what the nature of them was, how I was getting along and what I particularly wished done for me. I answered his questions and said that everything I could possibly wish for had already been done for me.

"I thank you," he said, "for myself and my people for your services. Our gratitude cannot be great enough toward men who have served us as you have."

He spoke in a very low voice and

SCENES IN A REST CAMP

HOW THE BOYS RECUPERATE AFTER BATTLE "OVER THERE."

The Billets Are Well Made and Everybody Shows Signs of Being Happy and Comfortable—A Correspondent Carries Away a Splendid Impression of the Canadian Army.

In France there are a thousand pretty villages that make ideal rest camps, winding roads where the mud never gathers deep, whitewashed cottages that hold out welcoming hands to the strangers, trees that have not been blighted by shell and shrapnel, barns with dry floors where a soldier curls in his blanket and sleeps as he never did in his Canadian bed, estaminets always bright and cheerful—and a host of pretty French girls who appreciate the lads who came across the seas to fight for them.

Into one such village I went to visit a famous Canadian battalion at rest after a long period in the front lines. There were the funny stores with the undressed windows, but fronted with business signs in English, the clay sheds that are erected while you wait and remain many, many years after you are blotted from the page, the quaint church that dates from untold centuries ago, the ornate cemetery behind the low stone wall, the barns hugging the streets—no sidewalks, no outstanding business centre, no public buildings but the church.

A group of officers stood before an estaminet discussing the latest drive up north. The O.C. came riding down the street and stopped to welcome us. In a dozen busy clusters soldiers were working with horses, camp equipment, canteen, stores and billets. On a nearby level a company was at drill—not severe or long, but enough to keep them in shape—and shooting practice was under plan for the morrow.

It was a scene of the pleasantest military life I have ever looked on, with no aggressive trace of discipline, yet no license, no fever of hurrying, yet no loafing. The drilling company trooped in from the field, straight and trim, and dispersed before its billets, military to the last moment. It was dinner time. Over in a shed two field kitchens, clean as when they were made, were roaring with fires and surrounded by busy cooks and orderlies.

They proudly showed me something of what they had for the men, and I was prepared to regret that I was timed to dine with the O.C. Soup that smelt full and meaty, and very hot; an appetizing mixture of carrots, turnips, and potatoes, which was welcomed by the soldiers with shouts; and bully beef, that was no more bully beef in its metamorphosis than pork tenderloin is cheap sausage. Now it was Hamburg steak; and not content with that, the cooks had mixed it in two ways, so that there was a choice. The recipe was not offered me, but one was made with flour, the other with oatmeal—one light in color, the other dark and, they told me, more popular. I tasted both. Why don't butchers in Canada sell bully beef, I wonder—and provide an army cook to make it? In the evening the pleasure of the rest camp were more fully enjoyed. Tommy would emerge from his barn billet, lean a bit of meat on a jagged piece of wall beside a pool of water, and commence cleaning-up process. Indeed, a mirror stood all day in a prot corner beside a water supply a mark of its owner's washroom shave, a hair-comb, a brush-up, adjustment of cap, and Tommy prepared for the joys of estaminet Y.M.C.A. A round of the camp revealed detail of its equipment and comforts. In a lean-to the canteen was set with its variety of pretty neat everything a soldier might desire add to the provision made for him elsewhere without cost. The store was sold with a small profit, 5 cent, of which went to the purchase of extra vegetables and other luxuries for the privates. The canteen is a battalion institution which the men appreciate.

About the entrance to the store was an orderly line of soldiers awaiting their turns at the counter. Inside was an array of tunics, breeches, underclothing, boots—all that is given the soldier. After a long siege in the trenches few require refitting, and the battalion in question had just passed through an unusually extended period of German baiting.

The pride of the battalion was transport. The 55 horses kept for that purpose were rolling fat, as heavy as an Axminster carpet, and clean as a lapdog. The attention their well-being was not only to advantage of the battalion in matter of facilitated transport, it gave new interest to the life of unit. Every member of it was delighted as the grooms themselves at the continued success of the stallions in the horse shows that organized at the front to maintain the calibre of the equine select. "That's Bob," explained my gatting a specially soft-haired horse that playfully put back its ears turned to nip. And not to know is to be ignorant of what counts the front. He was the all-round champion at the shows, or something like that. Grooms seemed to be ways on their coats, while others dextrously polished the harness must almost break their hearts the rules of war do not permit buying instead of the dull steel and iron. About the horse-standings all long stood a group of admiring low-members of the battalion—there is no insult in the term of lowship. Here and there was placed out an original member of transport column that had with the life for three years. And the who should know declare that later drafts do not equal those picked ones that came over on first boat of equipment from Canada. The veterans of the transport column are the snobs of equinedom France.

Continually the officers were going their rounds, attending to daily details of the battalion management, inspecting equipment work, but even more carefully so that every possible comfort and convenience was provided for the boys in their billets properly comfort their meals well cooked and plentiful, their wants supplied. It was a pleasant relationship between officers and men, accounting largely for content of both.

In the evening the pleasure of the rest camp were more fully enjoyed. Tommy would emerge from his barn billet, lean a bit of meat on a jagged piece of wall beside a pool of water, and commence cleaning-up process. Indeed, a mirror stood all day in a prominent corner beside a water supply a mark of its owner's washroom shave, a hair-comb, a brush-up, adjustment of cap, and Tommy prepared for the joys of estaminet Y.M.C.A. I requested to be taken to London, where I thought there was the best chance of my seeing Americans who might know me. Say, I sure made a good guess. I didn't know many Americans, but I didn't need to know them. They found me and made themselves acquainted. They brought things, and then they went out to get more they had forgotten to bring the first trip. The second day after I had been installed on a cot in the King George hospital, in London, I sent fifteen hundred cigarettes back to the boys of our battalion in France out of my surplus stock. "I thank you," he said, "for myself and my people for your services. Our gratitude cannot be great enough toward men who have served us as you have."

He spoke in a very low voice and with no assumption of royal dignity. There was nothing in the least thrilling about the incident, but there was much apparent sincerity in the few words.

After he had gone one of the nurses asked me what the King had talked about, and I told her he had asked me what I thought about the way the war was being conducted, and I said I'd drop in and talk it over with him as soon as I was well enough to be up.

There happened one of the great disappointments of my life. She was English. She gasped and glared at me, and I think she went out and reported that I was delirious again.

I looked in on the boys as they ate. The company I saw was billeted in a barn—not a nasty, smelly place, dark and dismal, but a lofty-roofed building, with lots of light, a dry floor, some straw, and the companionship of a cheery couple of hundred. They paid no attention to the visitors. Dinner was too good for attention to be deflected by anything short of orders. And as they ate they talked, lightly as at a dinner table, shouting across the room to their friends, making plans for the evening and the morrow.

The officers were billeted in farm houses. The O.C. was established in the cure's house, with a blazing grate at one end and the reverend gentlemen's library alongside—a cosy little room, where the work of the battalion went on under suitable surroundings.

A Costly Palace.

The people of Ontario are proud of the palatial Government House that they own in Toronto, but they are beginning to find it an expensive luxury. Government House cost taxpayers of Ontario over $28,000 last year. This amount included among other things, the wages of engineer and three firemen, and cost of 967 tons of coal for the furnace it included the cost of bullocks and shrubs, and the wages of the head gardener and five assistants and a few odds and ends, such as bottles, candlesticks, etc., which cost $84, and a pine cupboard and chair-rack which cost $280. It did not, course, include the Lieutenant-Governor's salary of $10,000, which paid by the Dominion Government nor did it include the cost of food or the wages of domestic servants which are paid out of the Government private purse.

The 967 tons of coal required feed what has been described as "Ontario Government's white elephant," was considered an excess amount by some persons who do not get any coal at all. The coal cost over $6,000. The sum of $2,000 was paid for a porter and charwoman while nearly $700 was expended on gardeners' tools, bulbs, seeds, fertilizers, etc.

In addition to the $28,000 for running Government House, the sum of $2,050 was paid to the Lieutenant-Governor "for running his office in Parliament Buildings," and an additional $1,400 was paid in salary to his aide, Hon. Col. Alex Fraser who also receives the salary of $500 as Provincial Archivist.

Procedure of Registration

On June 22nd every person residing in Canada, male or female, British or alien, of sixteen years or over, must attend one of the registration booths located in his or her district, and there observe the procedure explained below.

Where to Register

Every person required to register has the privilege of registering at any of the public places provided for that purpose. The location of all such places will be specified in proclamations posted conspicuously.

The card shown in the illustration is a facsimile of the registration card for females. An advertisement showing the card for males appears in another paper.

Study the questions carefully so that you will be able to answer them promptly when registering. If you have any special qualification, or feel that your services would be more beneficial to the country in some other line of work, say so.

While all are compelled to register on Registration Day, it is not contemplated by the Government to force the sick, feeble and aged to turn out. If such persons will notify the Registrar prior to June 22nd of their inability to attend at a place of registration, an effort will be made to register them at home, provided the request is reasonable and justified.

Remember the Day—June 22nd—Remember the Hours—7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Register early and get your Certificate for your own protection.

A round of the camp revealed the detail of its equipment and comfort. A lean-to the canteen was set up, with its variety of pretty nearly everything a soldier might desire to add to the provision made for him elsewhere without cost. The stock was sold with a small profit, 5 percent, of which went to the purchase of extra vegetables and other luxuries for the privates. The canteen is a battalion institution which the members appreciate.

About the entrance to the stores was an orderly line of soldiers awaiting their turns at the counter. Inside was an array of tunics, breeches, shirts, underclothing, boots—all that given the soldier. After a long day in the trenches few require no fitting, and the battalion in question had just passed through an unusually extended period of Germanizing.

The pride of the battalion was the transport. The 55 horses kept for that purpose were rolling fat, as velvety as an Axminster carpet, and as lean as a lapdog. The attention to their well-being was not only to the advantage of the battalion in the matter of facilitated transport, but gave new interest to the life of the unit. Every member of it was delighted as the grooms themselves.

The continued success of the sleek animals in the horse shows that are organized at the front to maintain a calibre of the equine section. That's Bob," explained my guide, letting specially soft-haired horse at playfully put back its ears and nipp'd to nipp. And not to know Bob to be ignorant of what counts at the front. He was the all-round champion at the shows, or something like that. Grooms seemed to be always on their coats, while others insistently polished the harness. It almost break their hearts that rules of war do not permit brass instead of the dull steel and iron. Out the horse-standings all day ng stood a group of admiring fellow-members of the battalion—and there is no insult in the term of fellowship. Here and there was pointed out an original member of the transport column that had withstood the life for three years. And the men who should know declare that the latter drafts do not equal those hand-cheked ones that came over on the first boat of equipment from Canada. The veterans of the transport column are the snobs of equinedom in France.

Continually the officers were making their rounds, attending to the details of the battalion management, inspecting equipment and work, but even more carefully seeing at every possible comfort and convenience was provided for the boys—barracks properly comfortable, meals well cooked and plentiful, their wants supplied. It was a pleasant relationship between officers and men, accounting largely for the content of both.

In the evening the pleasures of a rest camp were more fully enjoyed. Tommy would emerge from his barrack, lean a bit of mirror, a jagged piece of wall beside a bowl of water, and commence his cleaning-up process. Indeed, many a bather stood all day in a protected corner beside a water supply as the tank of its owner's washroom. A shave, a hair-comb, a brush-up, a readjustment of cap, and Tommy was spared for the joys of estaminet Y.M.C.A. The village I visited was but a transitory location for a rest camp, and estaminets provided assembly rooms for the boys. There were three or four of them, clean, bright and roomy. There gleaming songs were held, games played, stories told. They were Tommy's

Social Reconstruction

Coming in Great Britain

As Result of Great War

THE welding of classes which has taken place in the British army in the trenches has been such as could never have been accomplished in any other way, and the hope for the future of Britain lies in the possible extent to which this can be carried into social reconstruction.

This was the opinion expressed the other day by the Archbishop of York, now visiting Canada and the United States.

"The first and immediate necessity," said the archbishop, "is of course to conquer the Germans. But we are beginning to realize that this is only a part of the problem which the time has set before us; that, having conquered the Germans, we must conquer ourselves. The Labor party, which is developing with growing success the unification of the efforts of workers with the brain and with the hand, is working toward the condition when the industries will be controlled by the workers themselves, and this is only part of the great changes in the social and industrial scheme in Britain which are sure to come. It is quite safe to say that all our older families, all the landed aristocracy, are quite conscious of the fact that things can never be again as they were before the war; and they are most willing to face the changes that must come."

"So far as I have been able to observe there is this great difference in the effect which the war has had so far on public opinion in England and America. We all feel in England that the war has compelled us to reconsider in a very wide and deep way the whole character of our social system. The thought of social reconstruction is only less constantly in the minds of the people than the immediate progress of the war itself. We all feel that the war came to us at a time when we were all becoming conscious that our social system was revealing very deep defects, and our great trust is that the spirit of common fellowship which the war has called out may be transmuted after the war into an impulse toward wider social reconstruction, carried through in the same spirit of common fellowship and sacrifice."

"Certainly our soldiers at the front feel this. They seem to respond readily and with enthusiasm to the prospect that they will return home to take a place in the building up of a new and better social system. Indeed, this is coming to fill a larger place in the consciousness of most people than the appeals for solidness and enthusiasm in the war."

"The main impulse for this reshaping of our society will come from the great labor organizations, but nothing is more striking than the way in which the employers frankly recognize that they must be prepared to look at the new situation in a new spirit. The first definite proposal for economic reconstruction with the authority of the Government was the setting up of joint industrial councils for all the great industries, in which representatives of the workmen will meet representatives of the employers on equal terms for the settlement of all matters connected with the conduct of the industry. This plan so far has been carried out with real good-will by the best of the employers and the port of entry. Since 1896 it had been urged by Mr. Rogers, the representative of the Canadian Government, that Canadian cattle were free from disease. Mr. Prothero had said there was no ground for excluding Canadian cattle on the ground of disease, and Sir Robert Borden had said that was absolutely certain. What conclusion must be drawn from their testimony? Surely it was this, that so far as contagious disease was concerned, there was no justification on the part of the Government for refusing to allow Canadian stores born and bred in Canada to come into this country. This conclusion was supported and endorsed at the Board of Agriculture by those competent to express an opinion on the veterinary side of the question. Mr. Prothero never gave a pledge that because stores were required in this country they must be imported from Canada. In the opinion of the Board of Agriculture, supported by the representatives of Canada and fortified by veterinary experts, Canadian cattle were entirely free from disease. Mr. Prothero had pointed out that store cattle might be of assistance to the agricultural community in this country. No promise had been made, however, to permit the entry of store cattle into these shores. He could not promise that no act would be passed permitting the importation before the end of the war, because he did not know who might be in the position to decide, but no change could take place until the Act of 1896 had been repealed. Ample opportunity would be afforded all concerned to represent their views to the Board of Agriculture.

British Warship Botha,

Although Badly Crippled, Sank Enemy Destroyer

IN the engagement between allied and enemy destroyer squadrons off Dunkirk on March 21st the British destroyer Botha cut a German warship in half and took a leading part in the fight, although her main steampipe had been severed by a stray shell.

Early Thursday morning the British destroyers Botha and Morris and the French destroyers Capitaine Mehl, Magon and Bouclier were patrolling the eastern waters of the English channel when they heard enemy ships bombarding the coast of Dunkirk.

The fired star shells which had the effect of silencing the bombardment and scattering the enemy.

The destroyers started in pursuit of the Germans in a northwesterly direction and discovered eventually that the enemy ships were making for their base. A grim fight ensued, according to the stories of eye-witnesses. None of the German torpedoes found a mark, but the Morris, emerging from an enemy smoke screen, cut off a German destroyer of a large type and torpedoed her at a range of 500 yards. There was an explosion in the enemy vessel and she sank immediately.

Meanwhile the Botha had been crippled and she began to lose her way. The crew determined to do what damage they could and fired both their torpedoes at the two leading enemy boats. Then, her helm having been put hard over, the Botha rammed another boat cleanly amidships, cutting the enemy vessel in half. Swinging around the Botha at-

MORE V. C. HEROES.

Reasons For Several of the Recent Awards.

A supplement to the London Gazette contains the names of eight officers, one non-commissioned officer, and three men who have been awarded the Victoria Cross. Included in the list is the name of Second Lieut. Stanley Henry Parry Boughby, late Royal Scots Fusiliers, who receives the award for most conspicuous bravery displayed under the following circumstances: When the enemy in large number had managed to crawl up within 30 yards of our firing line, and with bombs and automatic rifles were keeping down the fire of our machine guns, he rushed forward alone with bombs right up to the enemy, doing great execution and causing the surrender of a party of 30. As he turned to go back for more bombs he was mortally wounded at the moment when the enemy were surrendering.

A second Scottish recipient is Lieut. (Acting Captain) George Henry Tatham Paton, M.C., late Grenadier Guards. When a unit on his left was driven back, thus leaving his flank in the air and his company practically surrounded, he fearlessly exposed himself to readjust the line. He personally removed several wounded men, and was the last to leave the village. Later, when the enemy four times counter-attacked he sprang each time upon the parapet, deliberately risking his life, and being eventually mortally wounded in order to stimulate his command.

Lieut. Paton was killed in the fighting near Cambrai in December last. He was the only son of Mr. George William Paton, formerly of Messrs. Ross, Corbett & Co., Croydon, and now managing director of Messrs. Bryant & May, Ltd., and the way in which the employers frankly recognize that they must be prepared to look at the new situation in a new spirit. The first definite proposal for economic reconstruction with the authority of the Government was the setting up of joint industrial councils for all the great industries, in which representatives of the workmen will meet representatives of the employers on equal terms for the settlement of all matters connected with the conduct of the industry. This plan so far has been carried out with real good-will by the best of the employers and the best of the leaders of labor.

"The Labor party's manifesto naturally and rightly points out the full demands of labor in a reasonable way, and represents the tendency toward which the movement will be directed. But beyond question there are in the full program many features which could not be carried out at once without dislocating industry. The real problem, however, is that employers must recognize the necessity of giving to the workmen a larger share of the product of the industry and a greater share of control of the management of the industry.

"On the other hand, the employers feel, and the best of the workmen feel, that this must be balanced by a greater output of productive energy on the part of the workers. So far as I can judge, the output per man seems to be greater in most industries in America than it is in England. We have been hampered by trades union regulations which have been made—in all good faith, to be sure—in the attempt to obtain a high average wage, but which the best workmen feel to be based on an imperfect knowledge of the facts of economics. So the alteration of these regulations is also a part of the problem; there must be a larger share for labor both in the reward and in the management of industry, and there must be larger productivity.

"One of the greatest tragedies of the war has been the great loss of the young men of the old families, the old governing class—men who embodied our greatest promise, who were inspired by our highest ideals of national service, were among the first to be killed. But the tradition they have left, the example they have given, will remain and will have profound effect in the public schools and universities which gave them to the nation. And not there alone. There has been a spirit of delightful and trustful comradeship of all classes in the war. It has brought all social groups together.

"But a very great deal depends on the decisiveness of our victory in the war. If, after all the sacrifices that have been made, the result is inconclusive, it will have a profoundly depressing effect upon the spirit in which all classes approach the future. Such an outcome of the war would render more likely the outbreak of bitterness, of party spirit, of class antagonism. A patched-up peace would leave everybody sore and querulous, disappointed, and with a strong tendency to meet the new conditions in the spirit of antagonism in which too often they met the old."

Canadian Cattle In England.

On March 6 the question of the British embargo on Canadian cattle was raised in the House of Lords. The London Times report of the debate which followed reads:

"The Duke of Marlborough, replying for the Board of Agriculture, said under special conditions animals might be allowed to come to this country, but he did not believe that those conditions had ever been put into operation, except in the case of animals for exhibition. The Act of 1896 was quite drastic, and embodied the principle of total prohibition, except for slaughter, of stores at the Swinging around the Botha attempted to repeat the ramming manoeuvre on the next German astern. The enemy craft, however, eluded the effort of the crippled Britisher but only to fall a victim to the French destroyers. Ablaze, the German boat lay disabled while the Frenchman pounded her with torpedoes and gunfire.

The Morris lost the rest of the quarry in the mist and took the lame Botha in tow, while the French destroyers circled around, picking up prisoners. From the statements of prisoners it appears that eighteen German craft participated in the raid and when they fled from the French coast, leaving three of their number behind, they were attacked by a British naval air squadron which pelted them with bombs and scattered them in all directions.

Two German destroyers and two German torpedo boats were believed to have been sunk in the action off Dunkirk, according to an announcement made by the British Admiralty on March 21st. It was said that no allied vessels were sunk and that one damaged British destroyer had reached port.

Prime Ministers' Wives.

Though quiet, the part played by the wives of British Prime Ministers in the political fortunes of their husbands cannot be said to have been insignificant. Lady Campbell-Bannerman, for instance, by her Scots sagacity caused her husband to prove adamantine in his refusal to let himself be sidetracked into the House of Lords. Mrs. Gladstone's devotion to her famous husband is a matter of general knowledge. Elizabeth Lee, who writes a book on the "Wives of Prime Ministers," speaks of her wise diplomacy concerning her husband's affairs: "When she was asked what Gladstone was going to do in some crisis or other, she would answer with the greatest naivete, 'Well, I wonder, don't you? What do you think he ought to do?' Once only, in the early days of her married life, she unwittingly said something that showed she possessed some important knowledge of a confidential character. She was very penitent, but Gladstone said: 'It is the only mistake you ever made!'" In devotion to her husband Mrs. Disraeli may be said to have rivaled Mrs. Gladstone, but she undoubtedly had the knack of saying things which might have been left unsaid, or said a little less clumsily. Some one once asked Disraeli if he did not get annoyed by the gauche things his wife so often said. He replied, "Oh, no! I am never put out by them." "Well then," reported his interlocutor, "you must be a man of most extraordinary qualities." "Not at all," answered Disraeli, "I only possess one quality in which most men are deficient—gratitude."

Iceberg In Lake Erie.

A berg was seen by the U. S. Light-house Tender Aspen, which was out on Lake Erie in search of gas buoys set adrift by ice. It is described as fully 200 feet in length and about 25 feet in height, and was drifting with the wind towards the mouth of the Detroit river. This is the first ever recorded on this body of water.

The gallant officer was born at Innellan, Argylshire, where his father was for some years the representative on the Argylshire County Council for Innellan and Toward. In common with his father, Lieut. Paton took a very keen interest in Scottish charities. He is the first officer in the Grenadier Guards who has received the V.C. since the Crimean War, and only five V.C.'s have passed through the regiment since the honor was instituted.

The third Scottish V.C. is Lieut. Hugh Mackenzie, D.C.M., late Canadian M. G. Corps.

Seeing that all the officers and most of the non-commissioned officers of an infantry company had become casualties, and that the men were hesitating before a nest of enemy machine guns, which were causing them severe casualties, he handed over command of his guns to an N.C.O., rallied the infantry, organized an attack, and captured the strong point. Finding that the position was swept by machine gun fire from a "pill-box," Lieut. Mackenzie made a reconnaissance and detailed flanking and frontal attacking parties which captured the "pill-box," he himself being killed while leading the frontal attack.

Lieut. Hugh Mackenzie was a native of Inverness, but subsequently removed to Dundee, where his mother resides. He was a great athlete, and, devoting himself principally to wrestling, he won the North of Scotland championship. He emigrated to Canada some years ago, enlisted in the Princess Patricia Light Infantry in 1914, gained the D.C.M., and was given a commission last April. He paid a visit to Dundee in October last, and was killed the same month. He was 30 years of age.

A Submarine Lily.

The great water-lily in the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, finished its longest season in January and has disappeared beneath the water of its tank. Usually the lily ends its career about the middle of October, but this year its life has been prolonged by the greater amount of autumn sunshine.

How the lily vanishes and is reproduced is explained by Mr. North, the curator. The thick root-stock gradually rots away, and the fruits, which are about the size of a cricket ball remain at the bottom of the tank.

They are fished up in the spring and the seeds are extracted. A single seed, though no larger than a pea, will in four months produce a plant that will cover an area of 1,000 feet.

In its native district, the Amazons, the Victoria Regia is largely used by the natives as food. It grows on the lagoons and is perennial.—Tit-Bits.

UNITED FARMERS MEET AT TORONTO LAST WEEK

THE FARMERS' DEMANDS.

Scorching denunciation of the action of the Union Government in the enforcement of the Military Service Act to the extent of drafting young men from the farms, the condemnation of Toronto papers, on the one hand, and on the other the declaration of the absolute necessity for the proper organization of the farmers of Ontario, and the establishment of a farmers' daily or weekly newspaper, were a few of the outstanding features discussed at a mass meeting on Friday in Massey Hall, Toronto, of 2,500 farmers, including members of the United Farmers Association of Ontario, under whose auspices the meeting was conducted.

Eight resolutions were passed, chief of which was one calling upon the Government to amend the Military Service Act, and asking that all owners or practical managers of farms be exempted to carry on their own work, and that in cases where they have already been drafted, they be granted extended leave of absence for this purpose, that skilled agricultural labor be exempted to supply one skilled man for each one hundred acres or the major part thereof in general farming districts and a similar requisite number in districts devoted to special production. That the Governor-General should be called upon to dissolve the present Parliament was demanded by several speakers.

J. L. Haycock, speaking at the convention said he would not criticise the government. It was first illegal and second it wasn't necessary. Further, he said:

"We should have showed more intelligence when voting. Of eighty farmers forty would vote Liberal and forty Conservative, thus cancelling their own votes, instead of exercising the balance of power. It is time that we used our own brains instead of the brains of our ancestors in the country churchyards."

CHARGE DISCRIMINATION.

The farmers wanted vengeance, and they believed they were justified in heaping upon the Union Government a stinging criticism on the ground that the Privy Council had not only been inconsistent in enacting certain forms of legislation, but had discriminated and given the manufacturer preference over the farmer, who was expected to get behind a movement, Dominion-wide, for greater production. It was also the expressed belief of many of the older farmers that the Union Cabinet had been inclined to accede to requests from their fellows in the Western Provinces, which had been responsible to a great extent for the animosity that characterized the speeches at the Massey Hall meeting on Friday. They wanted justice, and they did not propose to allow their demands to be shelved with any promises of "Your request will be given the most serious consideration." They wanted action, and speedy action, because the longer they were away from their farms endeavoring to have the Government move along certain lines, the greater the public would suffer.

"FARM OR FIGHT."

It was decided that another deputation of the United Farmers of Ontario should make a further appeal to the Privy Council for a more equitable adjustment of those clauses of the Military Service Act affecting their sons and farm-hands. The meeting also stoutly repudiated the charges that the farmers of Ontario had not been staunch supporters of the Union Government at the last election, and they considered it both unfair and unpatriotic to say that the rural constituencies had not performed their share in returning as their representatives defenders of the present Government. Their slogan was, "Farm or fight." It was not possible for them to do both, so they claimed that the Government should do its utmost to either leave them some men to till the ground, or strip the farms entirely and let some other country produce the foodstuffs necessary for the allied armies and those at home. Which was it going to be? It remained with the power of the Privy Council to offer a solution. Until this had been done the opinion was freely expressed that, in the event of failure to produce in as great volume as in former years, the farmers should not be held responsible, because they were prepared to do their part, and do it well, providing the Government backed them up and offered some encouragement.

A resolution demanding from the Minister of Militia, or his representative, at least four days' leave of absence for the boys prior to their departure overseas, was adopted unanimously.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

The report of the Committee on Resolutions submitted the following for presentation to the Government, which were approved:

(1) That because of the working of the order in Council of April 20th, relating to the M.S.A., many farms have been left without man on them; the stock is not being cared for, and an alarmingly large number of farms will soon pass out of cultivation.

(2) That farmers knowing the seriousness of the situation are losing confidence in the Government, and a serious condition of unrest is prevalent in the country and is growing.

(3) That the order in Council modifying provisions of order in Council of April 20th is not working out satisfactorily.

BANKS RUNNING THE COUNTRY

Another resolution was passed calling upon the Government to prevent "the further amalgamation of Canadian banks, unless it be clearly shown by the Minister of Finance in Parliament that the bank is becoming insolvent." John Galbraith, Todmorden, who introduced the motion, declared that the Canadian Bankers' Association was running the Government and the affairs of the country. The monopolizing of the banking system was going to effect the farmers. It was not possible for the farmer, under existing conditions, to obtain financial assistance from the banks as easily as in former years. He thought the farmers should discontinue reading their Bibles for a short period, and study the Canadian Bankers' Act. They would learn some facts that would open their eyes.

Ouch ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediate and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at an drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.

CHEVROLET

The TRAIL BLAZER to greater Motor Car Value

From the standpoint of dollar for dollar value there's not a car made which offers more for your money than the famous Chevrolet Four-Ninety A.

Before the Chevrolet was made in Canada, good cars were all high in price.

But our mammoth production and manufacturing efficiency enables us to sell the Chevrolet Four-Ninety A at a price much lower than its value when compared with other makes of cars.

With the surplus power developed by the famous valve-in-head motor the owner of a Four-Ninety A invariably is the "trail blazer."

Standard equipment includes speedometer, electric starting and lighting, ammeter, oil indicator light equipment, one man top, demountable rims, non-skid tires on rear wheels and many features usually looked for in cars much higher in price.

A most encouraging letter was received last week, from a Prisoner-of-war, thanking us for the needy assistance given him and asking us continued help. We are pleased to state that through the kindness of Mr. G. E. Evans M.A., in giving a donation of $10.00, several boxes can be forwarded to a new prisoner.

We are deeply indebted to the Hydro Electric Co. for a large roasted turkey, which on being raffled, netted a very handsome sum. Mr. Hemphill Daly held the lucky number. The kindness of the Company on many previous occasions, has received most favorable comments.

A quilt and 12 pairs of socks have been received from the Red Cross workers of Roblin; and a quantity of work from the Ladies' Aid of Sillsville, for which we would ask them to accept our hearty thanks. A donation of $25.00 from a friend has been thankfully received.

A shipment of 156 pairs of socks, 60 sets of pyjamas and 3 sweater sets was forwarded to the Navy League of Canada, Halifax.

The usual work-meeting will be held on Saturday afternoon to which all are invited.

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O.D.E.

The Chapter has, during the past week, received through its Treasurer a very generous donation for its Red Cross work, from Miss Janet Preston, of Pueblo, Colorado, for which the Chapter desires to express to the donor its very grateful thanks. Mrs. Lake, but lately returned from England and the United States, having resided for seven years in the former, and several months in the latter country; has kindly consented to speak quite informally, under auspices of the Daughters of the Empire, on Tuesday evening next, at 8 o'clock, in the Town Hall, Napanee. Mrs. Lake will speak in a conversational manner, answering questions and telling of her perilous trip across the Atlantic, and of what she has seen in England, in the United States and Canada, showing the differences in each country, and comparing the food situation and the conservation of the same practiced in each.

The meeting is open to all interested who will be cordially welcomed. There will be no fee or charge of any kind. Mrs. Lake being anxious only to impress others with observations which have forced themselves upon her, hoping thereby to do some good.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Chapter for this season to be held on Monday 17th inst., at the workroom, our Delegate will give her report of the 18th annual meeting in Toronto from the 27th to 31st May. A large attendance is hoped for.

London appears to be peculiarly appropriate, judging from a speech made by Dr. Walter W. Seton, secretary of the latter college, at the inaugural meeting of the Khaki University. The speech showed that the raison d'être of University College was to offer facilities for higher education at a time when England was still fettered by religious tests and other shibboleths. For this reason, it seems natural that this educational institution founded by Canadians in England without any precedent to go upon, should be welcomed and housed by University College.

"We are, comparatively speaking a young institution, young as universities go," said Dr. Seton. "We cannot look back to the hoary antiquity of the centuries like Oxford and Cambridge can; we can only go back about 100 years. Yet this college was, in a sense, a pioneer, for it was founded at a time when Oxford and Cambridge were not open at all but when their membership was limited to those who were prepared to subscribe to certain religious tests. The fundamental principle upon which this college was founded was that it should be open to all new ideas and to all new movements. Those are the principles for which it has stood during the years that have intervened since its foundation in 1826. At a later date the question arose as to whether women should be admitted to university education, again in that respect this college acted as a pioneer. Gradually it has come about that practically every department and faculty of this college has been thrown open to women students.

"Then again in the movement for receiving students from overseas, we may claim to a large extent to have been pioneers. For many years now the college has thrown open its doors to students from all over the world. In the years before the war we have gladly welcomed both undergraduate and post graduate students from the great overseas dominions, and among these were a very considerable number from Canada. Many of those who have so come, have by their intellectual work and by their contributions to the social life of the college adorned and enriched this institution. I should particularly like to point out that we have been undertaking post graduate work in all departments of the college. We hold as a cardinal principle that every department of the college must be prepared to undertake such work, and a great impulse to that has been given to the institution in recent years by the conferring of higher degrees such as Master of Arts, Master of Science or Doctor of Science, which can be taken by students from foreign universities and from dominions' universities after a period of two years of study. We feel there is a great opportunity, which will be yet greater after the war, and possibly during demobilization — for post-graduate work by many who have left the university studies to respond to urgent duty. We feel that there is perhaps a special opportunity for university such as this to become in a special way, but not by any means exclusively, a clearing house for Imperial intellectual ideas, a place to which all can come from overseas to gain, perhaps, a somewhat different conception of us from that which they have gained in the homeland. It is our hope that the movement which is now being inaugurated may be a step in the direction, and that many of you here may be ultimately yet more closely associated with us."

The meeting at which this address was delivered was attended by Dr. H. M. Tory and Lt.-Col. J. Obe Smith, Dominion Commissioner of Emigration, and several hundred soldiers from London and camp area.

Superintendent's Wife Gains Thirty-one Pounds By Taking Tanlac.

The following statement, made recently by Mrs. Annie Pasco, 57 Spadina Ave., Ottawa, is not only interesting, but altogether remarkable:

"I have not only gained thirty-one pounds by taking Tanlac, but I firmly believe it has saved my life, and all who knew of my dreadful condition are astonished at my wonderful recovery."

Mrs. Pasco's husband is superintendent of the J. R. Booth Paper Pulp Mill.

"I had been bothered with stomach trouble off and on for about three years", she continued, "but it was only during the past year that my condition became so serious. I first noticed my appetite failing, everything seemed to taste the same to me, and I had no relish for food of any kind. Then I began to suffer from gas, sour stomach and indigestion after meals. I had terrible headaches and felt weak and sluggish all the time. No one will ever know how I suffered, because I cannot describe it. None of my friends or neighbors believed I would live three months.

"I had fallen off from one hundred and seventy pounds to one hundred and thirty-two and got so weak I couldn't walk from the kitchen to the front door without holding on to something. I had to spend over half my time in bed, and was so nervous I was afraid to be left alone, and I could hardly sleep a wink at night. I took so much medicine without getting relief I became discouraged and out of heart.

"Finally, I decided to try Tanlac, as I had seen it recommended so highly, and before I finished the first bottle I noticed a decided change in my feelings. My appetite soon got better, the nervousness and indigestion began to disappear and I could feel my strength returning. Then, I began to regain my lost weight and now I weigh one hundred and sixty-three pounds—have actually gained thirty-one pounds—and haven't had a touch of indigestion or stomach trouble in six months. My appetite is fine, I can eat just anything I want without the slightest discomfort afterwards and my nervousness is gone entirely. I am feeling stronger and better than I have in years and am doing all my housework. I think it nothing but right that I should tell others about this wonderful medicine".

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

TO CARVE A HEAD.

There is a colossal, Gibraltar-like point of rock running out into Lake Massanaga which has been affectionately named by the Whitman Club of Bon Echo, of which Mrs. Flora MacD. Denison is the founder, "Old Walt." Upon a face of this rock the Whitman Club proposes to have carved an eighteen-foot bas-relief of the head of Walt Whitman, and many members of the club have contributed to the project, including Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Professor J. L. Banks of the University of Toronto is the sculptor, who, as a member of the club, has contributed his services, and his ideas will be carried out by another member, Mr. G. W. Morris of Buffalo. The model which Professor Banks has prepared is an interesting study of the rugged head of the poet, wearing the familiar broad-brimmed hat. Underneath are the words: "My foothold is tenon'd and mortis'd in granite."

I laugh at what you call dissolution. And I know the amplitude of time."

This is not the first time the idea of recording human history on this great tablet of nature has been carried out, for the face of the rock is already decorated in various places by Indian paintings, estimated to date back three hundred years. They commemorate a great battle fought at this natural stronghold, and though some of them are below the high water mark, they still retain their color.

It won't cost you anything to learn whether or not you would like an Auto Stop Razor. Try one for a month and if for any reason you don't want to keep it return it to us. WALLACE'S, Napanee's Leading Drug Store.

More Voters.

England's new Electoral Reform Act not only gives the ballot to women, but also to a large number of additional male voters. It is the most sweeping measure of enfranchisement in British history. The number of voters will be at least double, increasing from 8,000,000 to 16,000,000, and the latter figure is probably an underestimate.

The men voters will still be in a substantial majority for several reasons. The first is that the qualifying age for men is 21, or, if serving in the army or navy, 19, while no woman under 30 is admitted on any ground. In the second place there will still be plural voting, and although both men and women are restricted to not more than two votes each there will be far more men than women to qualify as twice-voters.

A woman may have two votes only if she is a university graduate, in which case she has a vote in her home district and also a vote for her university candidate. A man may have two votes under the same conditions, but he may also have two votes if he is a business property-owner in another district than his home.

As an illustration, take a family consisting of husband and wife and two sons, one, aged 19, in the army; the other 23, and a university graduate. The family lives in a London suburb, and the father is in business in London. He has a vote in his home district, and also one in the district where his business is located. The wife, not being a university graduate, has but one vote. The two sons will each have a vote as residents, and the elder will have an additional vote in the university constituency, and one or both may have a second or alternative vote on account of the occupation of business premises outside his residence district.

The wives of twice-voters will be potent factors of uncertainty on election day, for they are permitted to select which of their husband's constituencies they will vote in, and they need not announce this selection beforehand.

The old-fashioned British methods of electioneering are scarcely touched by the new law, except that the system is adopted of having all elections throughout the country on the same day. Proxy voting is allowed in the case of persons necessarily absent from their constituency on election day. It is noticeable that while a woman must be thirty to vote herself, a girl of 21 may be a proxy-voter for an absent male voter of nineteen.

As a check on bogus and freak candidates, every candidate must deposit $750, which is forfeited to the Government if he does not receive an eighth of the votes polled.

Sheep on Golf Links.

An interesting action at the meeting of the Stratford County Club was the power given to the directors to graze sheep on the golf grounds this year, if it should prove practicable. It was pointed out that this is done extensively in the Old Country as well as on some links in Canada. The sheep do away with the need of mowing the grass and as well the project would assist in production.

American Troops In Sarnia.

For the first time in history, armed American soldiers paraded the streets of Sarnia on March 22nd. One hundred men of Company F, 338th Infantry, of Michigan, headed by a band, 30 strong, were wildly cheered as they marched from the dock bay of Christian street to the City Hall, where a civic address of welcome was read by the mayor.

BEST TOOLS FOR GARDENLaying Hens Are More Profitable Than Ever.

Frequent Change of Pasture Protects Lambs from Disease and Ensures Steady Gains — Annual Pasture Has Proven Satisfactory.

Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

MOST gardeners use a hoe, rake, spade, and digging fork in their gardens. The three last are used chiefly during spring preparation of the soil and again in the fall during the harvesting of the crop. The hoe, however, is used almost all summer.

Most people in buying tools simply take what is offered, never considering that in using the heavier types sold in many stores much energy is spent in handling these, that could be used more profitably in doing other garden work. Besides, it is expected that women and children will do much of the garden work this season and it is necessary to give them implements suited to their strength.

For these reasons it has been urged on the gardeners to buy a hoe called the triangle, onion or beet hoe, with a cutting edge 4½ inches wide. This hoe is light to handle and does very satisfactory work, especially close in around the plants in the row. With it should be used the "Buco" type of cultivator with the two outside tynes removed. These two tools will do better work than any of the ordinary hoes with a great deal less expenditure of strength and in shorter time.

Where one has a larger garden, say 60 x 100 feet, it will be well to invest in a wheel hoe to help out the two above-mentioned tools. With the "Buco" to make a deeper mulch after a heavy rain or continuous tramping over the soil, the small hoe for close weeding, the wheel hoe makes it much easier to maintain a good mulch during the dry season, thus conserving moisture and advancing plant growth.—A. H. MacLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

At each access of rage he has put his writings in volumes, selling them at so much the copy. Le Devoir is moving heaven and earth against the allies, and is treating as outlaws the diplomats who have espoused our cause. Then he puts this stuff in brochures and sells them, filling his safe with the proceeds. Is he, therefore, not a war profiteer?"

The good layer of the yellow-legged breeds at this season loses the color from the feet and bill and these latter becoming almost white. The sleek plumaged, fat yellow-legged hens are usually very poor layers. It will pay to cull them out now.

The abdominal cavity, or the space between the pelvic bones (situated under the tail) and the end of the breast or keel bones should be relatively soft and flexible. If it is full of hard fat the hen is usually a very indifferent layer.

As a rule the earlier maturing pullets are the earlier and most profitable layers. By marking these the best breeders may be selected.

In grading up a laying flock purebred eggs should be purchased. From the chicks good female breeding stock may be secured. The male may be secured in very many cases in Ontario, from eggs secured by children taking part in school fairs. Watch the school fair winners this year.

It saves work to let the hens feed themselves—a hopper may be built at home without great expense.

Keep hens that lay over 100 eggs yearly and feed them carefully; kill the rooster and sell infertile eggs; gather the eggs daily and keep in a cool place in clean baskets; send the eggs to market quickly and regularly.—Prof. W. R. Graham.

Summer Forage for Lambs.

Frequent change of pasture is beneficial to, and relished by, all classes of stock and this applies with special emphasis to the case of sheep. It is true for two reasons. Sheep are subject to parasitic disease which may be prevented to a large extent by not pasturing on any one area for too great a length of time. In addition to this they are possibly more fastidious about their food than some other farm animals. It is not practicable on every farm to arrange for a succession of pastures during the grazing season. However, the same area will sustain considerable more sheep if such an arrangement is feasible. Rye sown early in the fall furnishes a good deal of pasture in the late fall and early spring. After the rye is eaten off in the spring rape may be sown on this land and will come along for pasture in June or July. Alfalfa and red clover are satisfactory pasture crops and will serve until the rape is ready. An annual pasture consisting of one bushel each of wheat, oats and barley together with eight pounds of red clover provides a good pasture for the early summer months, and the clover coming along in the autumn will give a nice picking. This annual pasture may be sown any time early in May. Without a great deal of additional labor it is possible to have a succession of crops ready for seeding throughout the entire season. The increase in health and condition of the flock will amply repay any such outlay of time and expense.—J. P. Sackville, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College.

"Native" Science.

The traveller of superior knowledge doesn't always impress the "native," or indeed, get the better of him in a contest of wits. A story is told of Sir John Lubbock that a countryman was assisting him in a field. Sir John, who was always ready to quicken the intelligence of any one who might be in his company, said to him, pointing to a heap of stones: "Do you know how these stones are made?" "Why, sir, I 'spect they growed, same as 'tatars." "Well," rejoined Lubbock, "if they lay there for fifty years, they would not get any bigger." "No, sir," was the reply, "in course they wouldn't—same as 'tatars. Take 'tatars out o' the ground and they stop growin'!"

CANADA FOOD BOARD EDUCATIONAL DIVISION.

Farmers may be reassured that there is no intention on the part of the authorities to inconvenience them unduly in their busy season with necessary restrictions and regulations as regards the hoarding of foodstuffs.

An order of the Canada Food Board recently made it illegal for people to have more than 15 days supply flour, made wholly or in part from wheat, on hand at one time. For people living at a greater distance than two miles and not less than five miles from dealers licensed by the Canada Food Board, sufficient for their ordinary requirements up to 30 days was allowed and for persons living more than 120 miles supply.

Further it was required that such surplus holdings should forthwith be returned to the miller or dealer from whom they were purchased, the purchase price or at the market price, whichever were the lower.

This Order was designed primarily to render a state of things in towns and cities, as it was commonly reported that some people had laid aside quantities of flour in view of the world's scarcity, selfishly thinking that they would be sure of a nor supply for the next year or so when the people in Europe starved or no

In the case of farmers, however, pointed out that it was their custom in many cases to take wheat to mill and get several months supply on one occasion so as to frequent trips and waste of time. require that such a farmer return surplus flour to the mill and to come back every couple of weeks, like short intervals, for supplies their own flour, would seriously interfere with farm work, occasion unnecessary travelling and the waste of days precious, especially at seed and harvest time, to the cause of production, a cause more important, e than that of conservation.

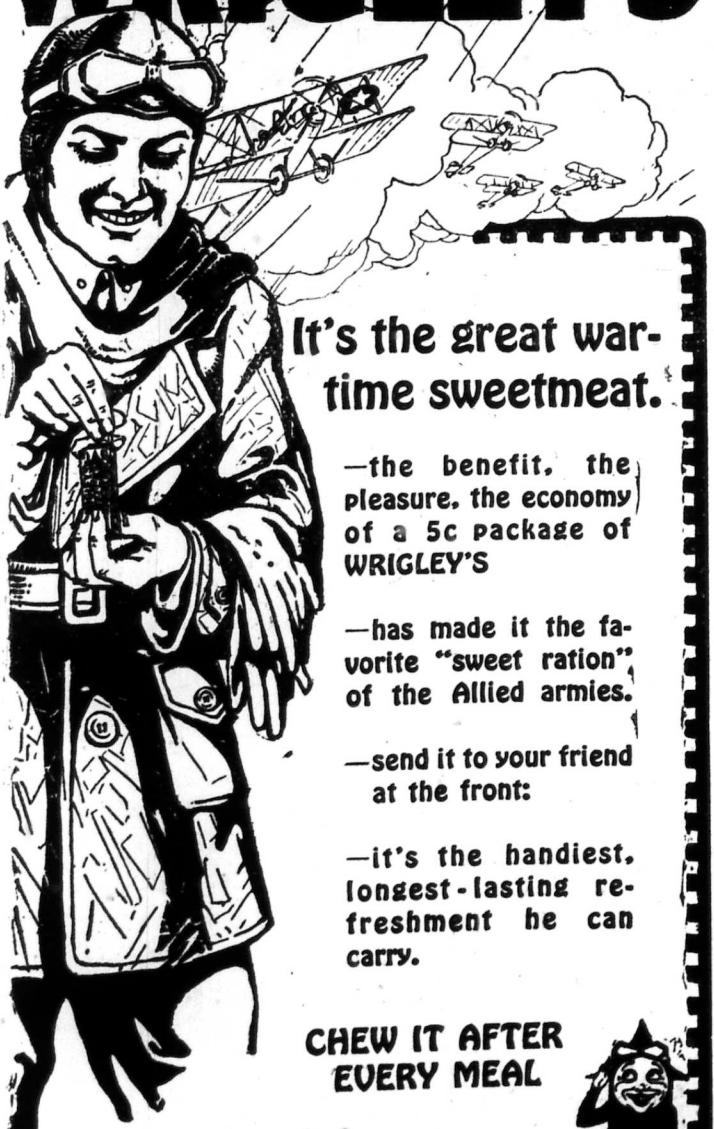

Bona fide farmers are not permitted to hold flour in excess of the amount provided for other people. An Order in-Council passed on May 17th makes this express provision:

"A bona fide farmer shall be permitted to hold, subject to the order of the Canada Food Board, the amount of flour, made wholly or in part from wheat, he may have in his possession in excess of the amount prescribed Order No. 31 if, on or before the day of June, 1918, he reports to miller or dealer, from whom it was purchased or by whom it was manufactured, the excess amount held him."

When these reports are received is the duty of the miller or dealer to pass them on to the Canada Food Board and thus it will be known by the authorities what the supply of flour is and where it is. Further Order provides that in cases where a farmer or any other person has in possession one partly used barrel package he shall not be required to turn his surplus requirements shall he be required to return amount of less than 25 pounds. Thus seen that the intention of the Order entirely reasonable and will not hardship or inconvenience unnecessarily.

Every Farmer Needs a Ford

THE Motor Car is a greater convenience to the average farmer than the telephone, the rural mail or even the grain binder.

The binder which is considered as a very useful implement is rarely used more than a few days during the entire year. The rest of the time it stands idle, taking up space, while the automobile is available for use throughout all seasons, and both day and night.

It is ever ready to run down the lane to the back field or the pasture with a parcel or a message, or take you and your family to town for shopping purposes—or on an errand to the neighbors.

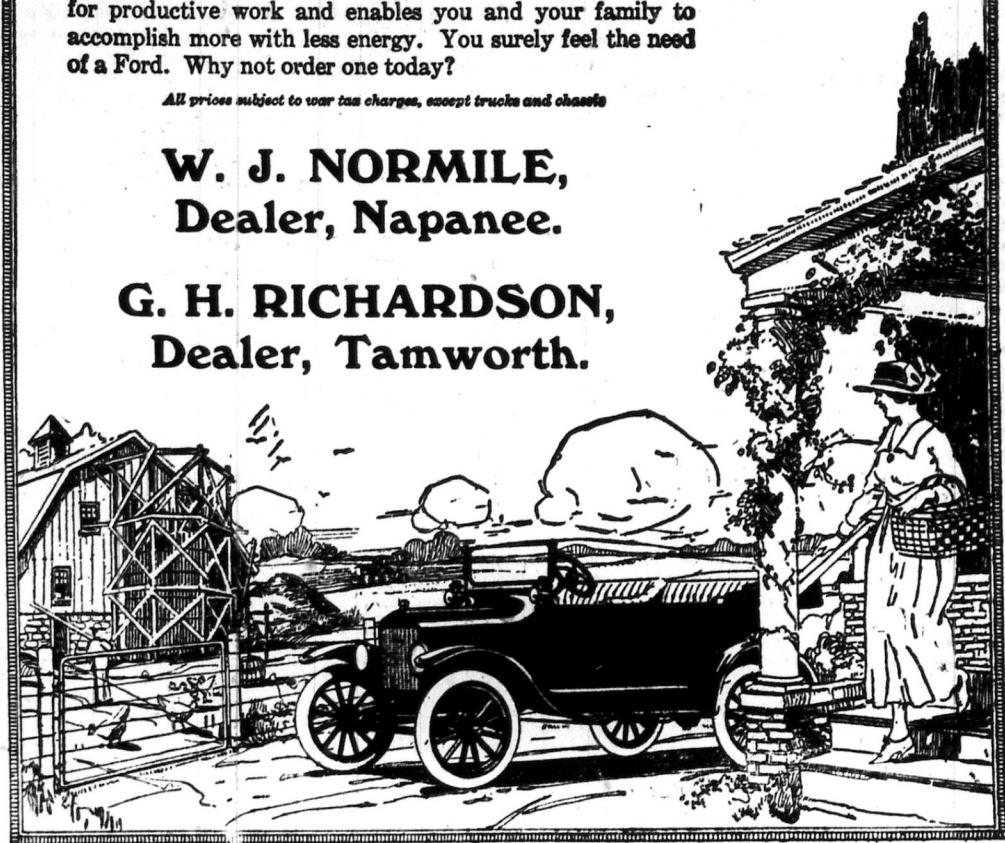

The motor car is called upon whenever anything is wanted in a hurry. It is the most useful implement or convenience for the farm. It helps you conserve your energies and time for productive work and enables you and your family to accomplish more with less energy. You surely feel the need of a Ford. Why not order one today?

REPORT ON SEED GRAIN.

The County Branch of the Organization of Resources Committee have concluded the distribution of high-class seed grain to farmers. A total of 2350 bushels of Marquis Spring Wheat was distributed to farmers in the County of Lennox and Addington at $2.00 per bushel. This is more than was sold in any other County in Ontario, and as much as was sold in six other Counties in Eastern Ontario. Three thousand bushels of improved O.A.C. No. 72 Seed Oats were sold at cost to farmers at $1.40, and many orders had to be refused as no more oats could be obtained. A car of high testing Seed Corn containing 1000 bushels of Leamington was brought in and sold at cost. Reports from farmers state that this Seed Corn gave an excellent stand. Much more corn could have been sold if available, and indications are that the corn crops in Lennox and Addington County will be twice as great as expected. Through the County Council assisting in bringing in a supply of good Seed Corn, every farmer was encouraged to grow corn, and practically every silo in the County will be filled this fall, and many new silos will be built this summer.

Both the County Council and the Organization of Resources Committee are to be commended for their aid in encouraging greater production.

Benton turned again to his papers. He did not broach the subject again until in the distance the squat hull of the Panther began to show on her return from the Springs; then he came to where Stella was putting the last of her things into her trunk. He had some banknotes in one hand and a check.

"Here's that ninety I borrowed, Stell," he said, "and a check for your back pay. Things have been sort of lean around here, maybe, but I still think it's a pity you couldn't have stuck it out till it came smoother. I hate to see you going away with a chronic grouch against me."

She sat on the closed lid of her trunk, looking at the check and money, three hundred and sixty dollars, all told. A month ago that would have spelled freedom, a chance to try her luck in less desolate fields. Well, she tried to consider the thing philosophically. It was no use to bewail what might have been. In her hands now lay the sinews of war she had foregone all need of waging. It did not occur to her to repudiate her bargain with Jack Fyfe. She had given her promise, and she considered she was bound irrevocably. Indeed, for the moment she was glad of that. She was worn out, all weary with unaccustomed stress of body and mind. To her just then rest seemed the sweetest boon in the world. Any port in a storm, expressed her mood. What came after was to be met as it came. She was too tired to anticipate.

It was a pale, weary eyed young woman, dressed in the same plain tailored suit she had worn into the country, who was cuddled to Mrs. Howe's plump bosom when she went aboard the Panther for the first stage of her journey.

A slaty bank of cloud spread a somber film across the sky. When the Panther laid her ice sheathed guard-rail against the Hot Springs wharf the sun was down. The lake spread gray and lifeless under a gray sky, and Stella Benton's spirits were steeped in that same dour color.

CHAPTER VIII.

And So They Were Married.

SPRING had waved her transforming wand over the lake region before the Fyfes came home again. All the low grounds, the creeks and hollows and banks were bright green with new leaved birch and alder and minutes they cleared the point. Stella was looking away across the lake at the deep cleft where Silver creek split a mountain range in twain.

"Look around," said he, "and tell me what you think of the House of Fyfe."

There it stood, snow white, broad porched, a new house reared upon the old stone foundation she remembered. The noon sun struck flashing on the windows. About it spread the living green of the grassy square. Behind that towered the massive, dark bued background of the forest.

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "What wizard of construction did the work. That was why you fussed so long over those plans in Los Angeles. I thought it was to be this summer or maybe next winter. I never dreamed you were having it built right away."

"Well, isn't it rather nice to come home to?" he observed.

"It's dear, a homey looking place," she answered. "A beautiful site, and the house fits, that white and the red tiles. Is the big stone fireplace in the living room, Jack?"

"Yes, and one in pretty nearly every other room besides," he nodded. "Wood fires are cheerful!"

The Panther turned her nose shoreward at Fyfe's word and soon slid in to the float. Jack and Stella went ashore. Lefty Howe came down to

A week or so after their return in sorting over some of her belongings she came across the check Charlie had given her—that $270 which represented the only money she had ever earned in her life. She studied it a minute, then went out to where her husband sat perched on the veranda rail.

"You might cash this, Jack," she suggested.

He glanced at the slip.

"Better have it framed as a memento," he said smiling. "You'll never earn two hundred odd dollars so hard again, I hope. No, I'd keep it if I were you. If ever you should need it it'll always be good—unless Charlie goes broke."

There never had been any question of money between them. From the day of their marriage Fyfe had made her a definite monthly allowance, a greater sum than she needed or spent.

"As a matter of fact," he went on, "I'm going to open an account in your name at the Royal bank so you can negotiate your own paper and pay your own bills by check."

She went in and put away the check. It was hers, earned, all too literally, in the sweat of her brow. For all that it represented she had given service three-fold. If ever there came a time when that hunger for independence which had been fanned to a flame in her brother's kitchen should demand appeasement—she pulled herself up short when she found her mind running upon such an eventuality. Her future was ordered. She was married—ere long to become a mother. Here lay her home. All about her ties were in process of formation, ties that with time would grow stronger than any shackles of steel, constraining her to walk in certain ways—ways that were pleasant enough, certain of ease if not of definite purpose.

Charlie Benton came to visit them. Strangely enough to Stella, who had never seen him on Roaring lake, at least dressed otherwise than as his loggers, he was sporting a natty gray suit, he was clean shaven, oxford ties on his feet, a gentleman of leisure in his garb. If he had started on the down grade the previous winter, he bore no sign of it now, for he was the picture of ruddy vigor, clear eyed, brown skinned, alert, bubbling over with good spirits.

"Why, say, you look like a tourist," Fyfe remarked after an appraising glance.

"I'm making money, pulling ahead of the game, that's all," Benton retorted cheerfully. "I can afford to take a holiday now and then. I'm putting a million feet a month in the water. That's going some for small fry like me. Say, this house of yours is all to the good, Jack. It's got class, outside and in. Makes a man feel as if he had to live up to it, eh? Mackinaws and calked boots don't go with oriental rugs and oak floors."

"You should get a place like this as soon as possible, then," Stella put in dryly, "to keep you up to the mark, on edge aesthetically, one might put it."

"It's a touch of civilization that looks good to me," Charlie declared. "You can put my private mark on one of some time later, in a moment of boredom, he put the Panther at her disposal for the afternoon. But he would not go himself. He had opened up new outlying camp and he had directions to issue, work to lay out.

"You hold up the social end of game," he laughed. "I'll hustle logs."

So Stella invaded the Abbey-Monob precincts by herself and enjoyed it, she met a houseful of young people from the coast, and in that light headed company she forgot for the time being that she was married and the responsible mistress of a house.

She had the amused experience beholding Charlie Benton appear hour or so before she departed, straightway monopolize Linda Abbott in his characteristically impetuous fashion. Charlie was no diplomat. He believed in driving straight to any goal he selected.

"So that's the reason for the onward metamorphosis," Stella reflected. "Well?"

Altogether she enjoyed the afternoon hugely. The only fly in her ointment was a greasy smudge bestowed upon her dress—a garment she prized highly—by some cordage coiled on the Panther's deck. The black tender had carried too many cargoes of loggers and logging supplies to be a fit conveyance for persons in party attire. She excused the soiled gown to Fyfe with vexation.

"I hope you'll have somebody scold the Panther the next time I want to go anywhere in a decent dress," she said ruefully. "That'll never come. And it's the prettiest thing I've got to wear."

"Ah, what's the odds!" Fyfe slipped one arm around her waist. "You buy more dresses. Did you have a good time? That's the thing!"

generous. He stood to her in the most intimate relation that can exist between a man and a woman. But she never fooled herself. She never had so far as Jack Fyfe was concerned. She liked him, but that was all. He was good to her, and she was grateful.

Nevertheless she had recurring periods when moodiness and ill stifled discontent got hold of her. Sometimes she stole out along the cliffs to sit on a mossy boulder, staring with absent eyes at the distant hills, and sometimes she would slip out in a canoe to lie rocking in the lake swell, just dreaming, filled with a passive sort of regret. She could not change things now, but she could not help wishing she could.

Fyfe warned her once about getting offshore in the canoe. Roaring lake, bent in the shape of a boomerang between two mountain ranges, was subject to squalls. Sudden bursts of wind would shoot down its length like blasts from some monster funnel. Stella knew that. She had seen the glassy surface torn into whitecaps in ten minutes, but she was not afraid of the lake nor the lake winds. She was hard and strong. The open, the clean mountain air and a measure of activity had built her up physically. She swam like a seal. Out in that sixteen foot canoe she could detach herself from her world of reality, lie back on a cushion and lose herself staring at the sky. She paid little heed to Fyfe's warning beyond a smiling assurance that she had no intention of courting a watery end.

So one day in mid-July she waved a farewell to Jack junior, crowing in his nurse's lap on the bank, paddled out past the first point to the north and, pillowng her head on a cushioned thwart, gave herself up to dreamy contemplation of the sky. There was scarce a ripple on the lake. A faint breath of an offshore breeze fanned her, drifting the canoe at a snail's pace out from land. Stella luxuriated in the quiet afternoon. A party of campers cruising the lake had tarried at the bungalow till after midnight. Jack Fyfe had risen at dawn to depart for some distant logging point. Stella, once wakened, had risen and breakfasted with him. She was tired, drowsy, content to lie there in pure physical relaxation. Lying so, before she was aware of it, her eyes closed.

She wakened with a start at a cold touch of moisture on her face—rain, great patterning drops. Overhead an ominously black cloud hid the face of the sun. The shore, when she looked, lay a mile and a half abeam. To the

at the camp saw her rescue would be speedily effected. Now, holding fast and sitting quiet, she looked eagerly about as the swamped canoe rose logically on each wave. Almost immediately she was heartened by seeing distinctly some sort of craft plunging through the blow. She had not long to wait after that, for the approaching launch was a lean lined speeder, powerfully engined, and she was being forced. Stella supposed it was one of the Abbey runabouts. Even with her teeth chattering and numbness fastening itself upon her she shivered at the chances the man was taking. It was no sea for a speed boat to smash into at thirty miles an hour. She saw it shoot off the top of one wave and disappear in a white burst of spray, slash through the next and bury itself deep again, flinging a foamy cloud far to port and starboard. Stella cried futilely to the man to slow down. She could hang on a long time yet, but her voice carried no distance.

After that she had not long to wait. In four minutes the runabout was within a hundred yards, open exhausts crackling like a machine gun. And then the very thing she expected and dreaded came about. Every moment she expected to see him drive bows under and go down. Here and there at intervals uplifted a comber taller than its fel-for their private use the Panther left to her appointed service, and the new boat Fyfe and Stella spent a day abroad on Roaring lake, fished together, explored nooks bays up and down its forty miles length, climbed hills together like bear of the ancient rime, to see what they could see. And the Water-servants put them on intimate terms with their neighbors, particularly Abbey crowd. The Abbeys took to wholeheartedly. Fyfe himself was highly esteemed by the elder Abbey, Stella suspected, for his power over the roaring lake. Abbey pere had built a big fortune out of timber. He exted any man who could follow the path to success. Therefore he Fyfe double credit—for making and for a personality that could be overlooked.

Summer slipped by. There were informal little hops at the Abode, return engagements at Fyfe bungalow, laughter and merriment Japanese lanterns strung across lawn. There were tea and tennis murmurings rivers of small talk, amid this Stella Fyfe flitted gaily, esteeming it her world, a fair picture of what the future might be. In that light it seemed passable.

ter, when summer was on the wane, she withdraw from much of this activity, spending those days when she sat buried in a book out on the porch with her husband. When October ushered in the first of the fall rains went to Vancouver and took apart. In December her son was born.

CHAPTER IX. One Call and a New Acquaintance.

WITH the recurrence of spring Fyfe's household transferred itself to the Roaring lake bungalow again. Stella found the change come, for Vancouver wearied her as a little too crude, too much as in the transitory stage, in that cibbledehey period which overtakes a village that shoots up overswiftly a city's dimensions.

she was quite as well pleased in a mild April saw them domiciled once again. In addition to Fann and Fend Shu, there was a nurse Jack junior. Stella did not suggest; Fyfe insisted on it. He was proud of his boy, but he did not let her chained to her baby.

apart from voluntary service on behalf of Jack junior, she was free as to order her days as she pleased that small morsel of humanity claimed much of her time, because she used through the maternal flood a part of that passionate longing to stow love where her heart willed. Sometimes she took issue with herself that wayward tendency. By all rules of the game she should have had her husband. He was like a solid, enduring, patient, kind and some distant logging point. Stella, once wakened, had risen and breakfasted with him. She was tired, drowsy, content to lie there in pure physical relaxation. Lying so, before she was aware of it, her eyes closed.

She wakened with a start at a cold touch of moisture on her face—rain, great patterning drops. Overhead an ominously black cloud hid the face of the sun. The shore, when she looked, lay a mile and a half abeam. To the north and between her and the land's rocky line was a darkening of the lake's surface. Stella reached for her paddle. The black cloud let fall long gray streamers of rain. There was scarcely a stirring of the air, but that did not deceive her. There was a growing chill, and there was that broken line sweeping down the lake. Behind that was wind, a summer gale, the black squall dreaded by the Siwashies.

She had to buck her way to shore through that. She drove hard on the paddle. She was not afraid, but there rose in her a peculiar tensed up feeling. Ahead lay a ticklish bit of business. The sixteen foot canoe dwarfed to pitiful dimensions in the face of that snarling line of wind harried water. She could hear the distant murmur of it presently, and gusty puffs of wind began to strike her.

Then it swept up to her, a ripple, a chop and very close behind that the short, steep, lake combiners with a wind that blew off the tops as each wave head broke in white, bubbling froth. Immediately she began to lose ground. She had expected that, and it did not alarm her. If she could keep the canoe bow on there was an even chance that the squall would blow itself out in half an hour. But keeping the canoe bow on proved a task for stout Atkins. The wind would catch all that forward part which thrust clear as she topped a sea and twist it aside, tending always to throw her broadside into the trough. Spray began to splash aboard. The seas were so short and steep that the canoe would rise over the crest of a tall one and dip its bow deep in the next, or leap clear to strike with a slap that made Stella's heart jump. She had never undergone quite that rough and tumble experience in a small craft. She was being beaten farther out and down the lake, and her arms were growing tired. Nor was there any slackening of the wind.

The combined rain and slaps of spray soaked her thoroughly. A paddle gathered about her knees in the bilge, sloshing fore and aft as the craft pitched, killing the natural buoyancy of the canoe, so that she dove harder. Stella took a chance, ceased paddling and bailed with a small can. She got a tossing that made her head swim while she lay in the trough. And when she tried to head up into it again one comber bigger than its fellows reared up and slapped a barrel of water inboard. The next wave swamped her.

Sunk to the clams, Stella held fast to the top sides, crouching on her knees, immersed to the hips in water that struck a chill through her flesh. She had the wit to remember and act upon Jack Fyfe's coaching—namely, to sit tight and hang on. No sea that ever ran can sink a canoe. Wood is buoyant. So long as she could hold on the submerged craft would keep her head and shoulders above water. But it was numbing and cold. Fed by glacial streams, Roaring lake is icy in hottest midsummer.

What with paddling and bailing and the excitement of the struggle, Stella had wasted no time gazing about for other boats. She knew that if any one man to slow down. She could hang on a long time yet, but her voice carried no distance.

After that she had not long to wait. In four minutes the runabout was within a hundred yards, open exhausts crackling like a machine gun. And then the very thing she expected and dreaded came about. Every moment she expected to see him drive bows under and go down. Here and there at intervals uplifted a comber taller than its fellows, standing, just as it broke, like a green wall. Into one such hoary headed sea the white boat now drove like a lance. Stella saw the spray leap like a cascade, saw the solid green curl deep over the forward deck and engine hatch and smash the low wind shield. She heard the glass crack. Immediately the roaring exhausts died. Amid the whistle of the wind and the murmur of broken water the launch staggered like a drunken man and lurched off into the trough, deep down by the head with the weight of water she had taken.

The man in her stood up with hands cupped over his mouth.

"Can you hang on awhile longer," he shouted, "till I can get my boat bailed?"

"I'm all right," she called back.

She saw him heave up the engine hatch. For a minute or two he bailed rapidly. Then he spun the engine without result. He straightened up at last, stood irresolute a second and peeled off his coat.

The launch lay heavily in the trough. The canoe, rising and clinging on the crest of each wave, was carried forward a few feet at a time, taking the run of the sea faster than the disabled motorboat. So now only a hundred odd feet separated them, but they could come no nearer, for the canoe was beam and slowly drifting past.

Stella saw the man stoop and stand up with a coil of line in his hand. Then she gasped, for he stepped on the coaming and plunged overboard in a beautiful, arching dive. A second later his head showed glistening above the gray water, and he swam toward her with a slow overhand stroke. It seemed an age, although the actual time was brief enough, before he reached her. She saw then that there was method in his madness, for the line strung out behind him, fast to a cleat on the launch. He laid hold of the canoe and rested a few seconds, panting, smiling broadly at her.

"Sorry that whopping wave put me out of commission," he said at last. "I'd have had you ashore by now. Hang on for a minute."

He made the line fast to a thwart sat shivering in the cockpit watching the man spill the water out of the canoe till it rode buoyantly again. Then he went to work at his engine methodically, wiping dry the ignition terminals and all the various connections where moisture could effect a short circuit. At the end of a few minutes he turned the starting crank. The multiple cylinders fired with a roar.

He moved back behind the wrecked wind shield where the steering gear stood.

"Well, Miss Shipwrecked Mariner," said he lightly, "where do you wish to be landed?"

"Over there, if you please. Stella pointed to where the red roof of the bungalow stood out against the green. "I'm Mrs. Fyfe."

The Borrowing Woman.

Day by day an Ontario housewife saw her household and kitchen furniture slowly disappear, according to the Argonaut. One morning, when Tommy, son of the borrower, appeared at the back door with the statement: "Ma wants the wash-boiler," the housewife determined to act.

"You can tell your ma that when she brings back what she has already borrowed I will lend her the boiler."

In a little while Tommy reappeared, "Ma wants to know what she borrowed." "There is a pound of flour," began the other, "a peck of potatoes, a cup of sugar, a can of coffee, a half pound of lard, some onions, and butter, and spices, the screwdriver, the hatchet, a pair of scissors, and"—she paused reflectively—"three spools of thread, a paper of needles, and"—But Tommy was gone. Presently he rapped on the back door again. "Ma says for you to write them down. I forgot some of them." Whereupon the housewife sat down with a pencil and patiently made an alphabetical list of all the articles she could remember. Tommy took the list and disappeared. A half hour later he once more appeared at the back door and announced: "Ma says if you will lend her the wash-boiler to carry them in, she'll bring them home."

Every dairy herd should produce the maximum of milk at the minimum of cost. This is a war need—produce more food at the least cost of feed. To do this the scrub bull must go. The co-operative bull association has sounded his death knell. No longer can he retard dairy development and hinder efficiency.

By breeding to superior sires milk production can be greatly increased in a single generation and greater economy effected. It has been impossible for the 4,000,000 farmers who produce the bulk of this country's milk supply, but who own an average of less than ten cows, to use bulls of high quality because of the great expense. By joining a bull association any dairy farmer may own a share in an excellent purebred bull at a cost far below that ordi-six or more years. The cost of bull service is thus greatly reduced, the best of bulls are obtained, and the man with limited means and only a few cows is enabled to improve his herd. Bulls of outstanding merit are preserved for their entire period of usefulness. Associations of this kind teach co-operation, encourage careful selection of cows and calves, introduce better methods of feeding and management, intelligently fight infectious diseases of cattle, and assist in the marketing of dairy stock and dairy productions.

KICKING COW EASILY CUREDRope Passed Around Body of Offending Animal, Drawn Tight, Will Prove Effective.

The kicking cow is easily cured by the proper methods. To cure the offending animal take a rope with a loop in one end of it or a trunk strap and pass it around the body of the cow. Draw it tight. The cow usually will jump a little at first, but when she finds she cannot get out of the rope, she will stand—and cannot kick. If this method causes the cow to give bloody milk, place the rope or strap behind the udder and draw it up in the same manner. With some cows this cannot be done because of the shape of the udder.

Another method is to hobble the cow by passing the rope around each leg behind the udder, and tying just above the hocks. This is rather dangerous for the man tying the rope. After the preventive measure has been repeated several times the cow will stand readily to be milked.

IN EARLY SPRING*Fowls Should Be Allowed to Make

Some Breeders Prefer to Use Hens for Hatching, as Geese Sometimes Become Difficult to Manage—Incubation Varies.

The successful raising of goslings should begin with feeding the geese an egg-producing ration during the latter part of the winter or early spring. The geese should be allowed to make their nests early in the spring on the floor of the poultry house, or in large boxes, barrels or shelters provided for the purpose.

The eggs should be collected daily and kept in a cool place where the contents will not evaporate too freely; if kept for some time they may be stored in loose bran. The first eggs are usually set under hens, while the last ones which the goose lays may be hatched either under hens or under the goose, if she gets broody. If the eggs are not removed from the nest in which the goose is laying she will usually stop laying sooner than if they are taken away. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their young. Hens used for hatching goose eggs must be dusted with insect powder and have good attention, as, in the case of geese, the period of incubation is longer than in that of fowls. Goose eggs may be hatched in incubators and the goslings successfully raised in brooders, although this is not a common practice.

Incubation of Goose Eggs.

The period of incubation of goose eggs varies from 23 to 30 days. Moisture should be added to the eggs after the first week if set under hens or in incubators; this is usually done by sprinkling the eggs or the nest with

NEW EVENING GOWNSFirst Season in Three That D

The tale of the spring evening gown should be an absorbing one, behold, it is the first season in which evening gowns have undergone a distinct change in style, mode, vogue, and a spring season ushered new evening gowns for the elect even ideas for the evening for those who sit by the fire, always present that it is a fire that necessitates nipping clothes to sit by it.

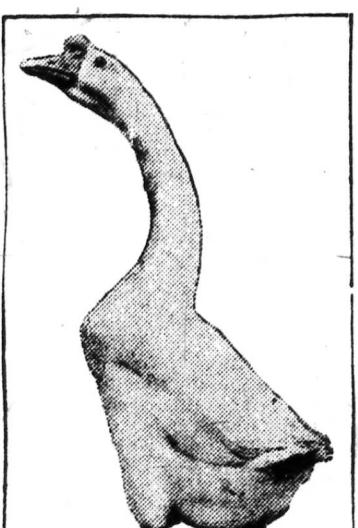

New skirts are sufficiently full to dance in, but long narrow skirts are impossible. And, in much as we will dance, notes a fashion authority, was or no war, for evening we abolish the narrow skirt in favor of the wide or draped skirt so that we may dance in comfort.

Some time ago I sounded the side of the sleeve in evening frocks. Every indication for the future seems all that I thought at that and even accentuates the fast Evening gowns without sleeves not.

Every design for the spring evening gowns have the sleeves, some wide and long, others long and narrow and a even elbow length, but the sleeves do not extend beyond the shadow of doubt.

The war will not necessarily affect the cut of the front or the back of evening frocks. Many of the offerings will carry the high square neckline and the V-shaped back, just as many will show the great cut extremely low both front and back and depend upon the effect of the sleeves to relieve the formal aspect of the creation.

In material black will have widest popularity. It has had its innings time and again and demand that this spring will find it in demand. Of the black laces the designs will have the preference.

By breeding to superior sires milk production can be greatly increased in a single generation and greater economy effected. It has been impossible for the 4,000,000 farmers who produce the bulk of this country's milk supply, but who own an average of less than ten cows, to use bulls of high quality because of the great expense. By joining a bull association any dairy farmer may own a share in an excellent purebred bull at a cost far below that ordinarily paid for a scrub. The initial cost is smaller and the maintenance cost is very much less.

Scrub Bull Worth More as Beef.

Dairy bulls are judged by their ability to increase the production of their daughters over the dams. Scrub bulls can only decrease production—thus lowering the efficiency of the herd. Their harm is not ended in one generation, but continues indefinitely. With beef at exceptionally high prices, sell the scrub bull, for his meat value far outweighs his dairy worth. A common practice for the farmer with a few cows is to breed to the nearest bull, regardless of breed, breeding, or conformation, and as a result dairy herd improvement is slow.

The cost of bull service also falls heavily on the commercial dairyman with a small herd, as bulls must be changed every two or three years to avoid inbreeding. As a rule, therefore, he buys a bull calf from the nearest farmer who keeps the breed in which he is interested. Too often cost is the first consideration. Too seldom is the bull purebred, and even then authentic production records of his ancestors are not usually available. The result is lack of improvement.

What a Bull Association Is.

A co-operative bull association is a farmer's organization whose purpose is the joint ownership, use, and exchange of three or more high-class, purebred bulls. The territory covered by the association is divided into three or more breeding blocks, and a bull is stationed in each block for the service of the 50 to 60 cows in the block. Every two years the bulls are interchanged. Thus, at small cost, a bull for every 60 cows is provided for the same manner. With some cows this cannot be done because of the shape of the udder.

Another method is to hobble the cow by passing the rope around each leg behind the udder, and tying just above the hocks. This is rather dangerous for the man tying the rope. After the preventive measure has been repeated several times the cow will stand readily to be milked.

SUCCESS IN DAIRY BUSINESS

Dairyman Must Put Himself Through Some Process of Training—Knowledge is Essential.

Under the strained circumstances of these days, to succeed in dairy work you must know how to think, and that means that you must have put yourself through some process of training, either on your own hook or by proxy, that is, with the help of a school or working for some practical dairymen. It does not matter at all how you get your information, just so you get it, but to begin dairying without it is as hopeless as to jump into a deep river without knowing how to swim.

DRINKING WATER FOR STOCK

Cow Will Not Reach Maximum Production Unless She Has Abundant Supply in Winter.

Warm drinking water for the dairy stock will save feed and also benefit the milk flow. It saves feed because it does not draw on the vitality of the cow as does cold water. It benefits the milk flow because a cow will not reach her maximum production unless she drinks water abundantly. This she will not do if it is ice cold.

IMPORTANCE OF GOOD ROADS

Farmers Depend Upon Short Haul to Get Produce to Market and Supplies for Operation.

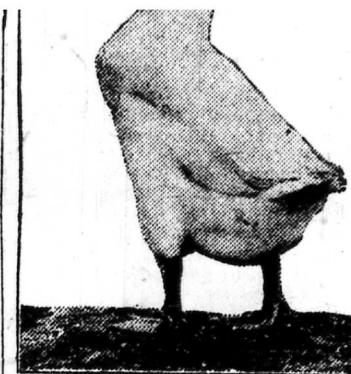

Because of the inability of the railroads to handle the traffic of this country, good roads properly maintained are absolutely necessary for further development and future prosperity. The farmers, more than any other class, depend upon the short haul for putting their products on the market, and getting supplies for the operation of their places.

SILAGE REDUCES BEEF COST

Result Given of Steer-Feeding Test Made at Missouri College of Agriculture.

A steer-feeding test recently completed at the Missouri College of Agriculture illustrates the possibility of reducing the cost of beef production by the extensive use of corn silage. Sixteen head of two-year-old steers fed for 180 days made an average gain in live weight of 322 pounds per head. They were fed 3.16 tons of corn silage, 750 pounds of alfalfa hay, and 503 pounds of cotton-seed meal and old process linseed oil meal per steer. They received no corn other than that contained in the silage. By this method of feeding a fairly satisfactory grade of beef can be produced, and it is possible to fatten three steers on an acre of good corn instead of one, which was usual under former methods of feeding.

warm water. Four to six eggs are set under a hen and ten to thirteen under a goose. They may be tested about the tenth day, and those which are infertile or contain dead germs should be removed. They hatch slowly, especially under hens, and the goslings are usually removed as soon as hatched and kept in a warm place until the process is over, when they are put back under the hen or goose. Some breeders who hatch with both geese and hens give all the goslings to the geese. Hens with goslings may be confined to the coop and the goslings allowed to range. The latter, especially if the weather is cold, are not usually allowed to go into water until they are several days old. In mild weather the hens are allowed to brood the goslings from seven to ten days, when the latter are able to take care of themselves. Good-sized growing coops, with board floors, should be provided for the goslings, and they must be protected from their enemies and given some attention when on range.

Feeding Geese and Goslings.

Geese are generally raised where they have a good grass range or pasture, as they are good grazers, and, except during the winter months, usually pick up most of their living. The pasture may be supplemented with light feeds of the common or home-grown grains or wet mash daily, the necessity and quantity of this feed depending on the pasture. Goslings do not need feed until they are 24 to 36 hours old, when they should be fed any of the mashes recommended for chickens or ducklings.

PRODUCTION OF GOOD CREAM

First Essential is Cleanliness in Handling Milk Utensils—Second is to Keep Cool.

It is almost as easy to produce good cream as poor cream. The first essential is cleanliness in handling the milk utensils, particularly the separator. The second is in keeping the cream cool until delivered and making at least tri-weekly deliveries in summer.

RAISE DUAL-PURPOSE CATTLE

Popular With Small Farmer Who Depends on Animals for Milk, Butter, and Meat Supply.

The dual-purpose cattle are popular with the small farmer who keeps but a few cattle and must depend on them to produce all the milk and butter needed for the family and, at the same time, raise calves or steers which will sell readily for slaughtering purposes. They have not been popular with the ranchman or farmer who raises large numbers of cattle.

ask Will Have Widest Popularity, Laces With Dots Embroidered, Choice Above Everything.

The tale of the spring evening we should be an absorbing one, for, hold, it is the first season in three evening gowns have undergone distinct change in style, mode and use, and a spring season ushered in evening gowns for the elect and in ideas for the evening for those to sit by the fire, always presuming it is a fire that necessitates evading clothes to sit by it.

Some time ago I sounded the slogan the sleeve in evening frocks, my indication for the future comes all that I thought at that time I even accentuated the fashion, evening gowns without sleeves are

Many of the spring designs will carry the high square collar and the V-shaped back, but as many will show the gowns extremely low both front and back and depend upon the effect of sleeves to relieve the formal aspect of the creation.

A material black will have the best popularity. It has had its ups and downs time and again and despite this spring will find it in great demand. Of the black laces the sheer designs will have the preference over the heavy tracings, while the laces with dots embroidered in great profusion will be the choice above everything.

Brocaded chiffons that were used last season will be given another trial combined with laces and charmeuse, and dresses of shaded nets will also be popular. All-chiffon frocks will not be given much of an opportunity early in the season, but will be held over until spring begins to wane into warmer summer months.

HOW HIGH ARE YOUR SHOES?

Fall Footwear Likely to Be Not More Than Eight and One-Half Inches in Height.

For a year we have been hearing a lot about the necessity for cutting down the height of women's shoes. It has been predicted a dozen times, a fashion writer states, that there is to be strict restriction in high shoes for women, and every time certain shoe stores have offered any specially priced shoes they have told us that the reason they did so was because of new restrictions as to the height of shoes. They had to get rid of their old stock, they told us, because they were no longer allowed to handle shoes of that height. Well, perhaps that was the case; but we still see women going about with shoes of extreme height, and only occasionally have we seen, so far, shoes of a moderate height.

Now the restriction is pretty near to becoming a fact. Probably we shall not have any fall shoes more than 8½ inches in height. The shoe man tells us that this is to be measured "from the rand at the breast of the side of the heel to the center of the tops at the side"—all of which may be very helpful if you happen to know the lingo of shoe dealers.

COVERT COATS HAVING VOGUE

Cloth Is Favorite This Spring For Chappies, Formerly Known to the Wearers as the Box Coat.

Covert cloth is having great vogue this spring and top coats in all lengths and on various lines are made up of this new old material. There are smart little coats on the lines of what were known once as "box coats," but now are termed "chappie coats." They are about finger tip length, are unbelted and flare slightly at the lower part.

Many of the long models of this material are made in cape effect. Others are fashioned on long, straight lines, belted and pocket trimmed, much on the lines of the coats worn by Uncle Sam's soldiers. There is a high turndown collar and deep cuffs. Four patch pockets with buttoned flaps trim the coat front, two small pockets on the bodice and two larger pockets on the coat skirt. A wide material belt is fashioned at the front with a large round dull metal buckle.

A Directoire Poke.

A theater hat in orchid georgette and hair braid is of the directoire period. The crown is of the orchid georgette and the brim of real hair braid in two-tone purple. Around the crown is a band and long ties of taffeta black velvet ribbon. On the front is an exquisite garland of pearls tinted in orchid and rose. The facing is orchid visca straw braid.

SHOULD SPONGE WOOLENS

Treatment of Material Before Being Made Up Will Prevent Its Shrinking and Water Spotting.

Woolen materials should be sponged before being made up in order to avoid shrinkage and water spotting.

Lay the material on a table that has been padded and covered smoothly with a cloth that is free from lint. Cover the woolen material with a wet cloth and press with a fairly hot iron until the cloth is almost dry, when it should be removed and the woolen itself pressed until it is dry. In pressing, the iron should be lifted and placed rather than pushed along. If the material to be sponged has a nap, the pressing should be done with the nap.

If double width material is to be sponged, it may be left folded, right side in. The wet cloth on one side is sufficient to stem both thicknesses, but both sides should be pressed in order to insure dryness.

Bordored Velour.

Yellow velour with a border design done in raised dots makes a very effective afternoon frock for summer.

ALL AT HOME SHOULD PREPARE FOR WAR

The first test a man is put through for either war or life insurance is an examination of his water. This is most essential because the kidneys play a most important part in causing premature old age and death. The more injurious the poisons passing through the kidneys the sooner comes decay—so says Dr. Pierce of Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., who further advises all people who are past thirty to preserve the vitality of the kidneys and free the blood from poisonous elements, such as uric acid—drink plenty of water—sweat some daily and take Anuric, double strength, before meals.

An-u-ric is a discovery of Dr. Pierce, and can be obtained at drug stores. For that backache, lumbago, rheumatism, "rusty" joints, swollen feet or hands, due to uric acid in the blood, Anuric quickly dissolves the uric acid as hot water does sugar. Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial pkg.

Thorold, Ont.—"I think Anuric is the best I have ever taken. My kidneys had given me trouble for some time. I would suffer from backaches and elsewhere swelling of the limbs. I took Anuric and it has entirely cured me of all my backache and has strengthened my kidneys so I feel safe in recommending it to others who suffer."—Mrs. C. A. Clarke, Box 1179.

Toronto, Ont.—"For the last eight years I have suffered with kidney trouble and rheumatism. It began with pains in my back and went down into the foot. It developed into a chronic case. I tried every medicine I could hear of and consulted some good doctors, but still I kept on suffering. About a year ago a friend advised me to give Anuric a trial, and am happy to say I am today a well man—never feel any traces of my ailment no matter what the weather conditions may be. Anuric is a real kidney medicine in every sense."—E. F. Garrison, 5 Matilda Street.

COW TESTING IS PROFITABLE

Farmers May Have Work Done at Nominal Cost by Joining Association—Cost is Divided.

Farmers who are too busy to test their own cows may now have this work done for them at a nominal cost by joining a cow-testing association. A cow-testing association is an organization of about twenty-six dairy farmers who employ co-operatively a man to test their cows for economical production.

The boy went to the house on Sunday morning and could not get in. In the afternoon he went back, and not being able to get in the front door, went around the house and looking into the kitchen window saw the body of Miss McHenry lying on the floor with one hand projecting above the window sill. A passer-by was called and relatives notified, who took charge of the remains. She must have been dead some hours, probably since Saturday, and the cause of death probably heart failure. Miss McHenry was 73 years old and for years was a music teacher in Napanee, but of late years had lived retired. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon.

New Ontario's immense forest reserves and seat of Provincial Colonization Scheme of Great Interest

The traveller nowadays wants something more than formal seat space and the well established service of the Canadian Northern to Western Canada affords ample opportunity for thought. The immense stands of merchantable timber, the untold wealth in water power, and the great commercial and agricultural possibilities of Northern Ontario should be matters of common knowledge to Canadians. Modern trains of standard and tourist sleeping cars and coaches leave Toronto Union Station at 10.00 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, connecting at Winnipeg for all points in Western Canada.

For information, literature, tickets and reservations, apply to nearest C.N.R. Ticket Agent, or write General Passenger Department, 68 King Street East, Toronto.

In religion a Methodist and always at church when possible. Two daughters, Mrs. Frank VanVlack and Mrs. R. E. McCaul are left to mourn his loss. DEATHS

BRUTON—At Napanee, on Friday, June 7th, 1918, Minna Bruton, wife of Mr. Chas. Bruton, aged 52 years, 9 months.

MCHENRY—At Napanee, on Saturday, June 8th, 1918, Ellen McHenry, aged 73 years.

ROBINSON—At Ernesttown, on Wednesday, June 12th, 1918, Miles Shorey Robison, aged 78 years.

In sad but loving memory of Signaller Frederick Arthur Laughlin, who made the supreme sacrifice, June 13th, 1916.

Just two years ago to-day, Dear. Since you fell in action facing the oncoming foe; A charge, a counter, then oh, that fatal gunshot, Death swift and merciful; this much we know.

Just as the sun set on the Eastertide The summons came which set your spirit free, And thus in all the splendor and the pride

Of youth you passed into Eternity. Spring in its glory has returned again, The awakened earth joins in the song of praise

I try to fight against the poignant pain And heartache overshadowing these days.

Because you loved the Spring. Your glad young life Reflected nature's fairest, sunniest hours;

And even in the midst of war and strife You dreamed of singing birds and woodland flowers.

So young and dear, your life was all too brief,

Just what you meant to me no words can tell, But this thought brings me comfort in my grief—

You are in God's care now and all is well.

O'er love like ours Death has no victory—

In sweet, glad memories you are living yet.

So shall love triumph through Eternity,

Death can come only when our hearts forget!

An Interesting Announcement of Open Meeting.

Mrs. Lake, formerly resident in England, and lately returned through the United States where she spent some months, will speak very informally to all interested, answering questions on general conditions of life and the food situation as she sees them in these countries and Canada, on Tuesday evening, the 18th June, at 8 o'clock in the Town Hall, Napanee, under auspices of "U.E.L." Chapter, I.O.D.E. There will be no admission fee or collection. For further particulars see Daughters of the Empire column.

Fishing and Canoeing in Algonquin Park, The Record of a Cruise on the Kawartha Lakes, Bear Hunting on Peace River, On the Trail of Ogarse, A Day on the Bras D'Or Lakes, are some of the contents of the June issue of Rod and Gun now on the newsstands. The Guns and Ammunition department this month is of special interest containing as it does a carefully written and practical article by one who has been "over there" on Sharpshooting in the Trenches. Every prospective soldier should read this article for it tells the soldier how to shoot to kill, and this is what it is needed if we are to win this war. There are other articles in this section worthy of note and the Fishing Notes section is up to its usual standard. Rod and Gun, the magazine of outdoor life in Canada, is published by W. J. Taylor, Limited at Woodstock, Ont.
